THEY OUTSHOOT LONE THUG

BANKER SHOOTS THUG IN DORCHESTER HOLDUP

British Rioters Loot Shops

POLICE STONED, BUSES BURNED BY RIOTERS IN BIG ENGLISH STRIKE

The most important developments today in the British general strike were:

1—Serious disorders reported from Edinburgh, Scotland, where several thousand clashed with the police, throwing stones and bottles. Shop windows were smashed and stores looted. A train was attacked near here and many hurt.

2—Both the government and trade unions remained firm in their determination to continue the strike.

3—Official government communique announces situation today better than yesterday. Motor road transport improved and no food shortage.

4—New efforts at mediation made by Lloyd George, former Premier, and John Simon, noted Liberal leader.

Strike Bulletins!

London, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Disorders were renewed in the Poplar district today. Several times mounted police cleared the East India Dock road of rioters. Eight arrests were made. A few rioters were taken to hospitals, suffering from minor injuries.

Leeds, Eng., May 6 (A.P.).—The Trades Union Congress is ready at any moment to resume peace negotiations in the strike, says a message received by the Baptist Union assembly here. Communications have passed between the Baptist Union and other churches with a view toward speeding mediation.

London, May 6 (A.P.).—Movement of troops and warships to vantage points for emergency service is going on steadily. While there is no disposition on the part of authorities to flaunt the Crown forces in the faces of the strikers, all the vital points are heavily protected by the army and navy.

London, May 6 (A.P.).—The government won a victory in the House of Commons today on its proposed measures to control the strike situation. A Labor amendment to a bill relating to the protection of property was defeated, 317 to 95.

GIRLS IN PANIC; MAN FELLED IN GUN FIGHT AS HE SEIZES MONEY

With more than $5,000 in his hand, obtained in one of the most sensational and daring holdups in many years, George Mastoris, thirty-four, of Magnolia street, Dorchester, was shot down and captured while trying to escape from the Uphams Corner branch of the First National Bank, following a pistol battle today.

Lawrence S. Bearse of Brookline, manager of the branch, felled the thug with a bullet through the head, the only shot he fired during the melee, and Traffic Officer John Cameron shot Mastoris in the left foot.

He was taken to the City Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list, but according to Dr. John A. Foley of the hospital staff, he will probably live.

The shooting created tremendous excitement in the Upham's Corner district, blocking traffic in Columbia road, and terrorizing hysterical girls.

POSSE IN HUNT FOR N. H. GIRL

East Rochester, N. H., May 6.—Headed by Sheriff William S. Davis and County Solicitor Everett J. Calloway, a posse today searched the surrounding countryside for pretty Catherine Hickey, sixteen-year-old high school girl who is mysteriously missing.

She dropped out of sight only 100 yards from her home on Saturday night.

While the search was being conducted in the woods, the county authorities were also trying to trace a Ford sedan that stopped for a girl near Blackwater Woods, Dover, N.

RESCUED 3 IN SOMERVILLE

Mrs. Sarah T. Murphy, her ten-year-old son, Stephen, and Harold Clayton, twelve, were rescued by firemen today when fire of undetermined origin cut them off on the second floor of the two- and one-half story wooden dwelling at No. 20 Bonair street, Somerville.

Hysterical with fear, the two boys started to leap from a window, but were persuaded to wait for the firemen by Mrs. Ellen A. Silk of No. 22 Bonair street, who shouted reassurance.

The fire started in the cellar and worked its way up into the hall of the first floor occupied by Thomas W. Clayton and family, all of whom were away, except young Harold, who was waiting upstairs to accompany Stephen Murphy to school.

QUICK ACTION IN COP KILLING CASE

Charged with murdering one Everett policeman and probably fatally wounding another, Carmine La Priore, 28, of Chelsea street, Everett, was arraigned in Malden Court today.

Simultaneously, and in the line of speedy prosecution, District Attorney Arthur K. Reading was calling a special session of the Middlesex County Grand Jury for presentation of evidence and the securing of a murder indictment.

A huge throng milled about the Everett police headquarters as La Priore, slim, haggard, trembling and cowed, was rushed into the vehicle that took him to the Malden Court at the beginning of a four-

ANOTHER lesson for the World Court idea. Senator McKinley, who favored putting this country into the World Court, League of Nations' back door, was defeated for renomination in Illinois by the biggest vote ever cast at a primary in that State. Senator Watson, of Indiana, also Republican, who voted AGAINST the World Court, now carries Indiana in the State's biggest Republican victory.

THE PEOPLE want Coolidge, but don't want the World Court. And they knew that, before these semi-revolutionary troubles in Britain, and before Kemal, of the Turks, invited Italy and the whole world to come on and fight.

Uncle Sam was to have accepted the mandate for Turkey under the League of Nations, Woodrow Wilson's scheme, you remember.

NO ONE KNOWS what will come of Europe's troubles, or what kind of World Court might be the outcome. But we do know that the court would be ten to one against us in the sincere conviction, that whatever happened we ought to pay the bill. And where there's a will there's a way.

LEVIATHAN PASSENGERS GO TO SOUTHAMPTON

New York, May 6 (A.P.).—The United States Line, operators of the Leviathan, today said that passengers bound for Southampton would be landed there. A dispatch last night credited French authorities with the statement that passengers en route to Southampton would be debarked at Cherbourg, but this was denied by the line.

TRAIN KILLS MAN WHO STEPS FROM BEHIND CAR

Brockton, May 6.—Locke Morrison, 43, of No. 654 Main street, was killed almost instantly here when he was struck by the locomotive of a train. Morrison stepped out from behind a coal car directly into the path of the engine.

BRITISH TOMMIES AID LONDON BOBBIES TO MAINTAIN ORDER DURING GENERAL STRIKE

REVIEWED BY KING GEORGE

These men once more are on the march, but this time their objective is not Flanders but London where they are going to help the metropolitan police keep order during these days of strike.

ROUTING THE RIOTERS

Similar scenes to the above, which occurred during the Liverpool dock strike of 1921 are being enacted in many cities of Great Britain today. "Keep the crowds amoving" is an order being strictly enforced by the police and military everywhere.

CLEARING THE STREET

Congested highways are ever regarded a menace during days of strike and the smallest gathering is a signal for the police to forward to disperse it no matter for what purpose it is assembled.

RIOTING MOBS LOOT STORES IN SCOTLAND; MANY INJURED

5—S. Saklatvala, Communist member of Parliament, given two months' jail term for uttering seditious statements in connection with the strike.

Edinburgh, May 6.—Looting was reported today as the result of serious disorders which occurred here during the night.

A crowd of several thousand threw bottles and stones through shop windows and looted the contents. The police charged the mob with batons, and mounted police rode into the rioters.

Five arrests were made. Five policemen and several civilians were seriously injured. A police sergeant was slashed in the back with a razor.

One mounted policeman's horse took fright at the crowds and crashed into an iron railing. The horse was killed and the policeman seriously injured.

Many passengers were injured when a crowd attacked a train at Musselburgh, near here. Showers of stones were thrown, shattering the windows.

A tense situation prevailed during the night in the northern district of Glasgow, where mobs interfered with the omnibus traffic, manned by volunteers.

One vehicle was overturned, the passengers just managing to scramble clear in time. Police dispersed the gang in a baton charge.

Determined attacks were made on buses in other localities and the police were severely handled until reinforcements arrived and restored order.

Five rioters were arrested and marched through the streets, which were seething with excitement.

All the tram cars were taken off early in the night. One hundred cars were working today, but they will be withdrawn at nightfall.

Buses passing through the town of Johnstone today were attacked by gangs which showered them with missiles. Many of the machines had every window smashed.

Police and Rioters Battle in Many Cities; Mobs Burn Buses

By H. R. REYNOLDS

(International News Service Correspondent)

London, May 6.—After a night of widespread, though isolated disorders which were checked only by firm and prompt action by thousands of police and troops, the third day of the British general strike opened today with the government and strikers both strongly entrenched, each stubbornly refusing to reopen peace negotiations unless the other breaks down.

Insisting that the strike is not a trade dispute but a concerted and well-planned assault against democratic government, Premier Baldwin today steadfastly stood upon his ultimatum that negotiations were out of the question until the trades union called off the strike.

MANY CLASHES STAGED.

At the present stage, with the industrial and transportation tie-up exceeding their expectations, the Congress executives said they would not consider halting the strike, although indicating they were willing to negotiate whenever the government was ready.

Meanwhile, the nation is generally calm, going about its business as best it can with a disorganized transportation system. The railways and bus companies, with the aid of the government, have succeeded in getting a sketchy service going, with ed prospects of steady improvement.

A large detachment of mounted police was rushed to Southwark after a mob had stopped, emptied and burned a bus.

At Hammersmith interference with the buses became so serious that police closed the principal streets to all vehicles plying for hire.

Gangs of rowdies were ranging throughout the district, stopping buses and removing their spark plugs. Hundreds of police on duty in the district were virtually ineffective. Although all of them are armed, they are under strict orders not to shoot unless their lives are in danger.

70 ARRESTS ARE MADE.

Seventy persons have been arrested.

Fighting was also reported at Shepherd's Bush, where a mob halted a trolley car under police protection and flung missile through the windows, shouting "blacklegs."

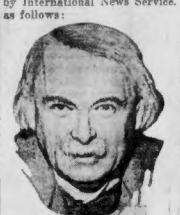
The police denied a report that a man had been killed in the East End.

The government is moving food and troops largely by motor trucks, assisted by barges and coastwise steamers.

The chief obstacle today in the path of a peaceful settlement was the effort of the rougher elements to keep individual motorists and independent bus drivers from operating to aid the movement of the thousands deprived of ordinary means of transportation.

What Leaders Say of British Labor War

LONDON, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Public opinion is widely diversified, on the general strike, as shown by statements collected by International News Service. Some striking statements are as follows:



LLOYD GEORGE

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, former Premier:—"The fate of the nation is in the hands of the government and I trust the emergency regulations will be carried out with the same restraint and impartiality that the British government has always shown. In that way the nation can come through with credit."

PREMIER BALDWIN: — "The general strike is a challenge to Parliament and is the road to anarchy and ruin."

SIDNEY WEBB, Socialist writer and former member of the Labor Cabinet:—"All this talk of revolution is metaphorical nonsense. The trades unions themselves know nothing of it. We are a cool nation."

WALTER RUNCIMAN, shipping magnate and former president of the Board of Trade:—"The general strike has ceased to be effective. We hope that the miners will realize that you can't get more out of an industry than there is in it."

ROBERT WILLIAMS, chairman of the Labor Party:—"I cannot venture to predict the duration of the strike, but it will continue until the government realizes the justification of the men's claims."

SIR ALFRED MOND, Conservative leader and business magnate:—"Like all general strikes this one is a partial success, but there can be no doubt the country will win through, although the dislocation and loss will be very great."

SIR ROBERT HORNE, former Chancellor of the Exchequer:—"The British people have never surrendered to tyranny and they will not surrender to it now."

LLOYD GEORGE IN NEW MOVE FOR PEACE

London, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Efforts at mediation in the general strike were made today by Lloyd George, former Premier, and Sir John Simon, noted Liberal leader and eminent lawyer.

Their efforts at mediation were undertaken with tact. If not expressed approval, by both the government and the strike leaders.

Political observers were inclined to be doubtful of the possible success of this mediation move by Lloyd George and Sir John, feeling that for these Liberal leaders to achieve any complete success would be too great a political coup to be permitted by either the conservatives or the Laborites.

It was believed, however, that the Liberal leaders might at least ameliorate the present situation, which seems a complete deadlock and bring the disputants to a point where they are willing to consider mutual concessions preliminary to resumption of negotiations.

London Food Prices Take but Slight Rise in Price

London, May 6 (A.P.).—London will have its usual supply of fish Friday, and also fresh Wiltshire hams and Irish bacon. It is said government circles are loking after the transport. It was stated today that the supply of fresh and chilled meat throughout the country is sufficient.

This seems indicated by the fact that there has been but a slight rise in meat prices in some of the remoter districts.

The complaint the housewives have to offer thus far concerns milk. They have been notified by the delivery companies that hereafter milk will be rationed something after the plans inaugurated during the war and that henceforth they will be allowed but half their usual supply.

London Stocks Dull; Wool Auctions Put Off

London, May 6 (A.P.)—The Stock Exchange today continued its dull but comparatively steady course. The attendance has been depleted through enrollment in the special constabulary, formed to preserve order during the strike.

Important meeting at the London Wool Sales today decided to postpone further auctions until circumstances permit their resumption.

'RED' MEMBER OF COMMONS IS JAILED

London, May 6 (I.N.S.)—The heavy hand of the British courts fell today upon S. Saklatvala, the little Parsee Communist, who is a member of Parliament.

Saklatvala, who was arrested on Tuesday on charges of having uttered seditious statements, was arraigned today and given a sentence of two months' imprisonment.

Saklatvala was charged with having urged workers to rise against the government in a speech delivered on May Day.

Saklatvala was released under bonds of $1,000 on Tuesday for arraignment today.

When brought before the magistrate, Sir Charles Biron, today a demand was made that he offer two sureties to keep the peace. Saklatvala said he could not arrange these sureties and he was given a prison sentence.

"No reasonable man can doubt that your speech was seditious and it was an act of criminal folly," said Sir Charles.

Saklatvala, taking advantage of the high position as an M. P., asked the court to grant him special privileges while in prison.

"There is no reason why this court should make special distinctions for you," said Sir Charles and ordered Saklatvala taken to prison immediately.

Strike Won't Solve Mine Problem, Says U. S. Expert

Washington, May 6 (A.P.).—Victory for either the miners or mine owners in the general strike in Great Britain will bring no solution of the problems facing the British coal industry, in the opinion of the Institute of Economics here, as announced today by its director, Harold G. Moulton.

Stating the conclusion on studies by two staff members, Mr. Moulton said the crux of the present problem is Great Britain's inability to sell enough coal to keep the industry alive and that its pressing needs are reduced coal cost and increased mining efficiency.

The institute suggested complete reorganization of the British coal industry to include amalgamation of collieries and adoption of large scale production, which, it argued, coupled with lower wages, would aid in recovery of trade.

Strike Bulletins

London, May 6 (A.P.).—A crowd at the Elephant and Castle, a well-known tavern and traffic centre in southeast London, today set fire to a motor bus run by volunteers. Mounted police dispersed the attackers.

Cardiff, Wales, May 6 (A.P.).—The light cruiser Cleopatra arrived today at this port, the principal centre of the South Wales coal trade. The number of strikers here has been swelled by 500 railway clerks, who quit today.

Paris, May 6 (I.N.S.) — Special British detectives have been stationed at the Bourget Airport to prevent extremists and Red agitators from entering England by way of the airplane service to Croydon, England, it became known today.

London, May 6 (I.N.S.).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has cabled the Trades Union Congress, stating that the Trade Union demands are "justified to secure a living wage for the miners," it was announced today.

London, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Eighty buses which went on the streets today in defiance of the general strike were so badly damaged that they had to be withdrawn from operation.

Rathgate, England, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Mobs today seized and looted a lorry which was engaged in transport work. The looters got a barrel of beer.

London Mobs Battle Over Makeshift Editions

London, May 6 (I.N.S.).—Virtually all the London newspapers, augmented by the official strike news bulletin, the British Gazette and the British Worker, appeared on the street in some form or other today.

The Times, the Daily Mirror and Daily Mail published makeshift editions, while many provincial papers succeeded in getting out abbreviated editions.

The British Worker was given permission to appear only after Scotland Yard inspectors were assured that it would contain nothing of an inflammatory nature.

Numerous bundles of papers were destroyed, and only after flat battles and scuffling were the remaining portions of editions loaded on trucks.

A man was arrested in the hallway of the Times office a few minutes after he had touched a match to a pool of benzine.

3 Sisters Take Veil

Rutland, Vt., May 6.—Three sisters, including twins, became Sisters of St. Joseph here, the Rt. Rev. Joseph J. Rice of Burlington officiating. The Misses Lena, Anna and Mary Moroney from Tipperary, Ireland, 10 miles from here and drove hurriedly in this direction.

The girl picked up answers in every detail the description of the missing pupil. The police theory is that she may have been taken to a house near this town and held captive.

Although the girl vanished Saturday night her absence was not reported until the following afternoon when an uncle, John Burke, told the police that her father asked him to notify them.

County Solicitor Galloway announced that he has definitely eliminated Raymond Coran and Clifton Marsh from the case. Their stories of the automobile ride to Alton Bay the night Miss Hickey disappeared have been carefully checked up and show that Coran left the girl at the Green street schoolhouse, one hundred yards from her own home at 10:50 Saturday night. He was afraid to escort her to her doorway through fear of her father.

From that point on no trace of the girl has been found.

While the authorities scout any theory of foul play, the Cocheco River has been dragged and the Cocheco Canal was drained without finding any trace of her.

The town is greatly excited over the great mystery and when the posse starts out it will be accompanied by scores of volunteers from the mills where the girls' father works.

Mayor Elihu A. Corson issued a proclamation appealing to every able-bodied citizen, men, women and children, not working, to join in the search.

UNION PAPER APPEARS ON LONDON STREETS

London, May 6.—The British Worker, official strike news bulletin, is the name of the eight-page paper printed by the authority of the Tradee Union Congress, which made its appearance on London streets. The leading article says:

"The response of the workers has exceeded all expectations. They have manifested their determination and unity to the whols world.

"They have resolved that the attempt of the mine owners to starve 3,000,000 men, women and children must be resisted, and not succeed."

WOMAN HURT BY AUTO SUES JEAN EAGELS

Declaring she was struck by an automobile owned by Miss Jean Eagels, leading lady in "Rain," during its run at the Park Theatre, Mrs. Ida Goldenberg, 52, of Charlestown, is plaintiff in a suit for $2,000 filed against the actress in Suffolk Superior Court.

Mrs. Goldenberg alleges that she was struck by Miss Eagels' car on Boylston street, near the Colonial Theatre, April 2, when the actress' chauffeur was driving back to a Park Square garage, after taking her to the theatre for the evening performance.

HUB GIRLS ARE STRONG FOR TRAINING CAMP

MRS. ANDREWS URGES GIRLS TO DEMAND CAMPS

Friends Take Up Fight for George Draper of Leominster at Fitchburg

Fitchburg, May 6 (A.P.).—Whether a student at a State normal school has the right to marry near the end of the final year of his course is a question that the courts may be called upon to decide.

George Draper of Leominster, who is within six weeks of graduation, and who recently married, has been suspended and his friends have begun a move to carry the case to the courts to have him reinstated. Draper declares that after his marriage to Miss Marion O'Brien of Lynn, he returned to school but was informed he could not attend his classes "for the good of the school and following out a principle long established."

Principal William L. Parkinson said he had advised Draper not to marry until he completed his course but Draper maintains he understood it would be all right.

GERALDINE MURPHY
Combination typist, bookkeeper, switchboard operator at Dorchester is enthusiastically for Miss Maloney's idea.

FRANCES TISEY
Of East Boston, where she is employed as a cutter, says the plan is an ideal one and hopes President Coolidge will act favorably.

TRAINING WOULD NOT MAKE THEM AMAZONS

Women, Fitted for Work, Would Release Men for War, She Declares

The Navy joined the Army today in saying a good word for military training camps for American girls.

The plan, first suggested by Miss Helen Maloney, of Brooklyn, in a letter to President Coolidge, which has stirred the ardor of young women all over the United States, was heartily endorsed by Mrs. Philip Andrews, wife of the Commandant of the First Naval District.

The hearty approval expressed by Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, wife of the gallant leader of the Yankee Division in France, was repeated with enthusiasm by the wife of Admiral Andrews.

"I think it a perfectly splendid idea," Mrs. Andrews said, "and if that Brooklyn young lady were here I should like to pat her on the back and tell her so.

"No less than 35,000 young men will be going away in August to spend the month at Fifty-one Citizens' Military Training Camps. Several hundred of these patriotic young Americans will be New England boys, assembling at camps all the way from Fort Adams, R. I., to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., but the most of them, of course, going to Camp Devens.

"Seeing these young men going away for a whole month, seeing them return, visibly the better for their four weeks as the working guests of Uncle Sam, I can only repeat Miss Maloney's question, 'Why not the girls, Uncle Sam?'

NOT MAKE AMAZONS.

"It is perfectly silly to say that a month in camp under military discipline will 'make Amazons' of our girls. None of our Girl Scouts is an amazon! No young woman has ever returned from a Y. W. C. A. camp demanding war!

"A great many women must regret that there was no such organization as the Girl Scouts thirty or forty years ago, and that the Y and its Summer camps were scarcely known, in what some folks will insist were the 'good old' days.

"I know exactly how Helen Maloney felt when she wrote her letter to the President, and I am not surprised to learn, from the brief interviews that have been appearing in the Evening American, that there are scores of girls in Greater Boston who share her sentiments and want the camps thrown open to the sisters of the boys who go to Devens and elsewhere.

"Only last night, I read a dispatch from Washington telling what the Citizens' Military Training Camps are intended for, and I respectfully call the phraseology of the official announcement to women who may be shuddering at the thought of what might be before our girls in a training camp. This is what the announcement says:

"'The object of these camps is to bring together young men of high type from all sections of the country on a common basis of equality and under the most favorable conditions of outdoor life; to stimulate and promote citizenship, patriotism and Americanism; and through expert physical direction, athletic coaching and military

BANANA REGION HELD BY REBELS

Managua, Nicaragua, May 6 (A.P.).—The revolutionists commanded by Luis Beltran Sandoval and Elizeo Buarte, who captured Bluefields Sunday, have now taken control of the Trio Grande Valley, the great banana region, by the capture of La Cruz and Rio Grande. They also are said to have taken the strong government garrison at El Bluff. The government has recaptured Nasiame from the revolutionists and is sending a large force of men to retake Bluefields and the other towns.

W. J. Crampton, the American collector of customs at El Bluff, and Mrs. Crampton have not been heard from since the position was captured. The United States cruiser Cleveland is expected to arrive in Bluefields shortly from Panama.

It is announced that when the revolutionists looted the safe of the Bluefields branch of the National Bank of Nicaragua, Sunday, they took $160,000 in unissued currency.

SAFE STOLEN FROM STORE IN CAMBRIDGE

The fruit store of Berahat Shalesles, No. 194 Concord avenue, Cambridge, was broken into early today, and a safe, 36x40 inches, containing jewelry valued at $600 and $85 in cash was stolen.

The thieves, who left no traces behind them, stole a watch and chain, the property of the proprietor of the store, and robbed a gum slot machine. The break was discovered when Shalesles opened up today.

MRS. FULLER IS GUEST OF GIRL SCOUTS

One hundred delegates to the International Council of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, including about forty foreign representatives, foregathered today at Cedar Hill, Waltham, for the first session of the three-day convention. Foreign delegates and a number from New York arrived today at India Wharf.

Preliminary business was conducted as soon as the delegates reached Cedar Hill, an estate of eighty-five acres left to the Girl Scouts by the will of Cornelia Warren. Addresses by various delegates were scheduled for this afternoon.

The party will tour Boston tomorrow and will be received by Governor Fuller, Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell, wife of President Lowell of Harvard, will serve tea to the delegates in the afternoon.

The evening will be spent at the Boston Art Museum. The meeting will be brought to a close Saturday with the annual State review of the Society of Arts at Palm Beach last season, when he was frequently seen with Mrs. Dodge. They met two years ago in Europe.

MRS. DODGE AND ACTOR TO WED SATURDAY

New York, May 6—That Mrs. Horace Dodge, Sr., widow of the automobile manufacturer, will be married to Hugh Dillman, actor, was practically verified when it was learned that Mrs. H. H. Stoteshury had asked Mrs. Dodge to be married in her home at Philadelphia.

It is understood, however, that the wedding is scheduled to take place in Detroit on Saturday.

Mrs. Dodge, who is now in Detroit, refused to discuss the reported engagement with newspaper men. Dillman, who is in New York, only said:

"The entire matter seems like a private affair to me. If we wanted such a fact known we would announce it at the proper time. Until such time I feel quite free to deny it regardless of whether it is true or false."

Dillman, the divorced husband of Marjorie Rambeau, was manager of the Society of Arts at Palm Beach last season, when he was frequently seen with Mrs. Dodge. They met two years ago in Europe.

Dillman was Mrs. Dodge's agent in her recent purchase of the $2,000,000 home of Joshua Cosden at Palm Beach and in which she says she will live next season.

VALENTINO'S FORMER MANAGER HELD FOR TAX

Hartford, Ct., May 6 (A.P.).—Antonio Romano, who managed the tour of Rudolph Valentino and his former wife, Winifred Hudnut, when they appeared in exhibition dancing and beauty contest shows in Connecticut in 1923, was held in bonds of $2,000 today on a charge of non-payment to the Federal government of $1,648 claimed due in amusement taxes. Romano, a disbarred Providence, R. I., lawyer, had been promoting beauty contests in Connecticut and Rhode Island. It was in connection with these that the tax is claimed to be due.

Peabody, May 6.—Charles Buxton, motorman, had a narrow escape when five shots fired from an auto at South Peabody smashed several windows in his car.

SENATORS AT WHITE HOUSE ECONOMY TALK

Washington, May 6 (A.P.).—A group of Republican Senators were guests of President Coolidge today at another breakfast conference at which legislative matters bearing on the economy program of the administration were discussed. Attending were Senators Cummins of Iowa, Watson of Indiana, McMaster of South Dakota, Howell of Nebraska, Reed of Pennsylvania, Lenroot of Wisconsin, Edge of New Jersey, Ernst of Kentucky, Warren of Wyoming and Fernald of Maine.

TIRE THIEVES MAKE OFF WITH $100 LOOT

Thieves today invaded a window in a filling station owned by John Ezris at No. 875 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, and took tires valued at $100. The break was discovered when the place was opened for business. Mattapan police are investigating.

MRS. PHILIP ANDREWS URGES GIRLS TO DEMAND CAMPS

MEN WOULD BE FREED FOR WAR

training, to benefit the young men individually, and bring them to realize their obligations to their country.'

"A very slight change in this announcement, making clear the nature of the training which would be given to the girls, and the plan, it must be admitted, would be as beneficial to girls as to boys; and in each case equally beneficial to the country.

WOULD RELEASE MEN.

"Girls, of course, would be trained in those lines of the common defense which, in time of war, are work for women.. Nursing, Red Cross work, clerical posts, women were everywhere in the late war, and they did splendid work. There are any number of positions which, in time of need, women could fill as well as they are filled by men. With women properly trained for these posts their availability would release great numbers of men for actual fighting.

"The idea, in my opinion, is most commendable. I am altogether in favor of it. It seems to me that it is quite up to the girls. If they want military training camps, and if they will let it be known, there will be no stopping them.

"I want to be of help in any way that I can and so far as my other duties will permit shall be glad to join hands with those who may undertake to make Helen Maloney's idea something more than a happy vision."

Helen Maloney, the 21-year-old Brooklyn girl, who overnight found herself in the national limelight through her advocacy of Summer training camps for girls.

Sex equality is the basis of her plea. The government provides Summer training camps for young men —why overlook the girls?

Enthused by announcement that President Coolidge favors the principle, Miss Maloney prepared to carry on.

"I'm very happy to know that the President approved of the idea of Summer training camps for girls," she said. "If the principle is right, then the obstacles must be overcome.

UP TO YOUNG WOMEN.

"It is now up to the young women of the country to convince members of Congress that there is a necessity for them. It is their job to show that the Summer training camp program for which Congress appropriates millions of dollars is only half complete so long as the girls are left out.

"The women — especially the young women—must support the newspapers and the many able men and women who say that we ought to have such camps."

The little Brooklyn miss is sounding her clarion call displayed a bit of the Irish determination which caused her to write to President Coolidge when she was convinced the idea she had been harboring was a good one.

"I'm just overwhelmed the way the idea has spread," she explained. But there was not the slightest evidence that columns of newspaper publicity had turned her from her big idea to personal glorification.

NOT A FLAPPER.

She remains just a typical American girl of fine Irish lineage, the daughter of a retired business man who goes to her work as a stenographer each day. She plays tennis and swims, for there is a tennis court at her home and the ocean beach is four blocks away. Her heart goes out to thousands of factory girls who never have the chance to play, who do not know what a vacation means.

Helen Maloney might be described as a flapper were it not for the serious manner in which she voices her views of life. A pretty, Titian-haired slip of a girl, she likes dances and the theatres as do other girls of her age.

"There's a lot of exaggeration in that term 'flapper,' she said. "The girl who lives in a hall-bedroom doesn't have any playground but the dance hall and the movies. Is she to blame if she gets the wrong idea?"

BUSINESS MEN AID.

Able business men who have espoused the cause of the citizens' military training camps for young men have pointed to the increased efficiency they show in business because of the discipline of the camps the lifting of spirit and improvement of the body.

"The country can't raise just strong men; it must have strong women as well" she exclaimed.

"I often thought of how no one seemed to really help girls over 18. There are many activities for the younger girls. Many of them go to Summer camps, and then after they grow up all this is lost. Of course, some older girls can go to camps, but not many can afford to, and no one can supply the training the government can give.

"It's up to women," she repeated. "If they'll just enlist, we'll win the battle."

U. S. SENATORS FOR TRAINING OF WOMEN

Washington, May 6 (I.N.S.)—A race of stronger Americans would be developed if the government established national training camps for women, Senator Morris Sheppard, D., of Texas, declared in endorsing the plea made to President Coolidge by Miss Helen Maloney of Brooklyn.

Miss Maloney's proposal, if Congress provided the necessary funds, Sheppard predicted, would improve the national defense by creating a second line of defense composed of women.

Sheppard's endorsement of Miss Maloney's proposal revealed a growing sentiment in Congress for action on the plan.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (D), of New York, a noted health authority, who endorsed the plan with enthusiasm, meanwhile announced he was considering the introduction of a bill to authorize women training camps.

BOSTON MAIDS ENTHUSE OVER GIRL CAMPS

And still they come—more girls who hail the idea of a Summer training camp and the chance to develop muscles and maybe "strengthen convictions."

Representative working girls from every part of Boston are voicing their endorsement of Miss Helen Maloney, New York stenographer, who in a letter to President Coolidge appealed for a girls' training camp.

It is the best thing they've heard of in a long while, they agree, and in chorus echo favorable sentiments on its possibility of materialization.

FLORENCE NELSON, Boston—"It would be a great get-together to meet other girls from other parts and become friends. An exchange of ideas and social contact would benefit all girls. The thought of no fussing, no primping, but to be one's natural self—that alone wins me over to Miss Maloney. She's a clever girl and deserves a medal awarded her for her initiative in so ably championing our cause."

GEORGIE McLAUGHLIN, Roslindale—The long, long trail should wind to an isolated spot where an outfit of healthy and happy girls are enjoying nature's own. No men, not even a little look at them. Just to be by ourselves. Girls would relish such a change.

Weber and Heilbroner and Brokaw Brothers are famous New York stores. They stand for Fifth Avenue styles and good old Knickerbocker quality. Theirs is a fine tradition to carry on.

The name of Brokaw Brothers has never before been used to advertise anything outside their fine Times Square store. Neither of these houses shop in the open market but have all their ready-to-wear clothing made up for them according to their own rigid specifications from woolens that they buy themselves either in this country or through one of their three European offices. The only exceptions are their fine imported clothes.

Hence you are assured of exclusiveness, fine fabrics and sound workmanship in Brokaw Brothers or Weber and Heilbroner clothes.

THUG IS SHOT IN DARING BANK HOLDUP

GIRLS IN WILD PANIC.

Twenty girls clerks employed in the bank branch fled for their lives to the cellar when he shooting began, some of the customers who were present slipped out and procured assistance, and others crouched on the floor in terror.

The hero of the affair was Manager Bearse, whose one shot brought down the thug after Paying Teller Joseph McLellan of No. 1143 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, had emptied a gun unsuccessfully at Mastoris.

The heroine was Miss Ella G. Brown, telephone operator, who stuck to hers witchboard on a balcony above the banking rooms and telephoned the police.

Mastoris, whom the police say, is employed as a counterman in a Bowdoin avenue restaurant, is thought to have had accomplices who awaited him outside, but in the excitement no one noticed them.

DARING THUG ENTERED.

The bank had been open for business about an hour, and several customers were making deposits or withdrawals. Allen McLean of No. 151 Fayette street, Watertown, and Earl L. Shea of No. 81 Draper street, Dorchester, completed their business and stepped through hte swinging doors to the street. Harry Sherman of No. 20 Greendale road, Dorchester, and Edward C. Titcheaum of No. 158 Columbia road, Dorchester, were making deposits.

Suddenly employes and customers were hurled from the placid routine of business by a shot which boomed in the closed room like a cannon. Looking up they saw a swarthy, bow-legged man, wearing dark clothes, standing in the centre of the floor.

His entrance aginal having attracted the attention of all, the man who was later identified as Mastoris, cried:

"Hands Up!"

All obeyed, and he began to walk toward the window of Paying Teller McLellan, although keeping a wary eye on all the others present.

Again he spoke, this time remarking:

"Throw up your hands, everybody. I haven't killed a man for five years. Throw 'em up."

GUN BATTLE BEGINS.

The girl clerks employed behind the cage stooped low so that the stone rail protected them and fled screaming to the basement. McLellan, standing with hands upraised, dropped out of sight, behind the rail.

Beside him in the next cage was his assistant, Douglas C. Campbell of Brookline, to whom Mastoris turned his attention.

"Throw out the money," he ordered, and Campbell, with the man's weapon trained on him, fumblingly complied.

Bills and coins to the amount of $5,553 were raked across the counter by Mastoris, who then demanded that Campbell produce a bag in which to carry the money.

SHOT BY TWO AT ONCE.

As Mastoris started to stuff the money into the bag, McLellan popped up from behind the counter, a revolver in his hand, and fired six shots, all going wild.

Mastoris dropped to a crouching position on the floor and returned the fire, after which he coolly reloaded his gun from a reserve supply in his pocket.

He had reached the end of the stone counter rail when Manager Bearse came out of his office in the rear of the cage, gun in hand. Just as Officer Cameron reached the outer door.

Both fired and Mastoris sank to the floor unconscious.

Policeman Tells of Shooting at Bank

Patrolman John J. Cameron, who shattered the glass in the front door of the First National Bank branch with a fusillade of shots at the hold-up man, gave the following version of the battle in his report:

At 10:15, while on my post at Upham's Corner, I was attracted by the noise of shots coming from the bank.

I left my post. As I entered the vestibule of the bank I saw a man with a gun in his hand, inside, with several persons standing with their hands in the air.

I pulled my gun and fired two shots through the glass in the door. The bandit wheeled around and fired several shots at me. I fired another shot and the bandit dropped.

Then I fired two shots outside into the air to attract other officers. The bandit, while on the floor, fired more shots in my direction.

Special Officer Arthur O'Shea, who was off duty came on the scene then and fired a shot at the bandit.

When he got into the bank we found that the bandit had a gunshot wound in his head and another in his foot and we sent him to the hospital.

HUNTS FOR LOST RING UNTIL SHE FINDS IT

Diligence of Mrs. William Frederick of Bigonnerth street, Malden, was rewarded today when she recovered a $300 diamond ring from a mass of papers and waste at the city dump. After discovering the loss of the ring, she remembered she had placed some papers in a waste basket and suspected the ring had slipped from her finger then. She hunted up the ash collector, Donald Doherty, of Sherman street, who told her where the refuse had been dumped. With her husband and several women neighbors, Mrs. Frederick searched the spot until she found the ring.

ANNA Q. NILSSON TO STAR IN VIENESE FILM

A vivid picture of post-war Vienna, formerly one of the gayest capitals of Europe but now reduced to the stagnation of an overwhelmingly defeated nation, is shown in "The Greater Glory," notable film of the season, to be shown at the Washington Street Olympia starting Monday.

June Mathis, who is responsible for the screen story of "The Four Horsemen," prepared "The Greater Glory" for production from the successful novel, "The Vienese Medley," written by Edith O'Shaughnessy, wife of an American diplomat in Vienna.

Anna Q. Nilsson is the star of the picture, which is said to be a faithful portrayal of the gay life of the Austrian capital before the war.

EVERETT COP'S SLAYER IS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

ney that may land him in the electric chair.

In court the charges against La Priore read that he murdered Patrolman William P. Staples, fifty-three, of No. 54 Pleasant avenue, and assaulted, with intent to kill, Special Officer John J. Lonergan, fifty-seven, of No. 17 Mansfield street, both of Everett.

The trembling figure whose most conspicuous garment was his blood-stained shirt, waived reading of the complaint but made no plea to the charges against him.

He was without counsel and Judge Charles M. Bruce, to await developments, continued the case until May 13.

The whole proceeding consumed less than two minutes and when it was over the crowd of court spectators, including many women, who stood at the back, were herded out of the room. La Priore was rushed over to the East Cambridge jail held without bail.

Staples was felled with two bullets in a battle in an alley off Argyle street, Everett, after Officer Lonergan had been downed with two bullets at Harris avenue and Argyle street.

Today, eighteen hours after the fatal chase of La Priore, the special officer still battled with death on his hospital cot, with a bullet through a lung and another in his liver. No hope is held out for his recovery.

GIRL NEAR COLLAPSE.

Meanwhile, at her home, No. 15 Mansfield street, Miss Elizabeth Doyle, nineteen, the innocent cause of the tragedy, was in a highly nervous condition.

It was Miss Doyle's report to her brothers that La Proire had persisted in annoying her that started the series of incidents which ended with the killing of Patrolman Staples and the shooting into submission of La Priore as he crouched, barricaded, in the closet of the house at No. 7 Clinton place, Everett, from which he had driven Mrs. Thomas E. Bennett.

In an alleged complete confession, made through an interpreter, La Priore was declared by the Everett police today to have admitted annoying Miss Doyle on two occasions and to have admitted similar annoyances to other girls in Malden and Everett.

ONCE FINED AS ANNOYER.

Once, according to the police, he was put into court for his alleged improper actions and was fined.

One of La Priore's admissions in his alleged confession was that he shot officer Lonergan because the officer had been watching him for months and he thought it was a good chance to kill him. The captive gave no reason for telling Patrolman Staples.

The Doyle girl, returning home from work in Boston, was accosted near her home by La Priore, she declared today.

Hastening into her home, she told her brothers, John J. Doyle and William Doyle, one of whom she met coming out, that the man of whom she had complained before was in front of the house.

HOW TRAGEDY BEGAN.

William, who is twenty-two, ran out of the house, seized La Priore and began to trounce him, when John J. Lonergan, Jr., son of the special officer, ran out of his home, almost adjoining the Doyle home, and pulled his friend Doyle out of the fracas.

Then young Lonergan's father, who had just come off duty, emerged from the house and ordered La Priore to get out of the district and stay out.

The Doyle brothers decided, however, to make formal complaint against the annoyer and John Doyle, accompanied by Elizabeth and her sister, Mary, walked uptown until they met Patrolman Staples, to whom they reported the incident.

Staples returned and picked up a sight of La Priore going toward Argyle street. Then Officer Lonergan came out and joined Staples, the two policemen determining to take La Priore into custody as a suspicious person.

But LaPriore, in a sudden panic, broke into a run, ignoring shouts of his pursuers. Patrolman John A. Brock joined in the chase, cutting around the block to head LaPriore off.

Edward C. Gernon Tells of Chasing Slayer

One of the pursuers of Carmine La Priore, Everett police slayer, was a motorist, Edward C. Gernon of No. 282 East Ninth street, South Boston, and he told today of his part in the chase.

"I was riding on Mansfield street going toward Argyle street," said Gernon. "I saw the officers following a man and I followed along Argyle street likewise.

"I saw the fellow draw a gun and fire, saw Officer Lonergan fall and then I jumped out and ran with Officer Staples back of a house on Harris avenue just as he crumpled to his knees with his revolver in his hand.

"I heard another shot as Staples was trying to get up. Blood gushed out of his mouth and he fell flat on the ground.

"He was still holding his revolver. I took the gun from him and examined it to see that there were bullets in it. I then called to some man to help the officer and I gave chase again until Officer Card asked me if I would give him the gun."

McCARTHY APPOINTED TO SUCCEED SUGHRUE

Chosen from a list of more than a dozen Boston lawyers who were candidates for the position, James J. McCarthy today is preparing to take over the duties of public administrator of Suffolk County following his appointment by Governor Fuller.

McCarthy succeeds the late Michael J. Sughrue, who held the office for many years.

The new administrator was associated with Mr. Sughrue for many years.

In Shooting

Elizabeth Doyle of Everett, whose brothers summoned police when Carmine La Priore insulted her. One policeman was killed, another wounded by the man.

SLAYER OFTEN HAD ANNOYED MISS DOYLE

Miss Elizabeth Doyle, innocent instigator of the Everett police tragedy, declared today that Carmine La Priore, who killed one policeman and wounded another, has annoyed her on several occasions.

"I was walking up Mansfield street on my way home," said Miss Doyle in describing what led up to the chase and the shooting. "At Green and Mansfield streets I saw this fellow and recognized him as the same man that had followed and annoyed me before.

"He waited for me to go into the house and when I went in I told my brothers about him and my brother William and I walked up Mansfield street and met him in front of Officer Lonergan's house.

"Officer Lonergan came out and told the man to go away. He walked along Mansfield street, toward Argyle street, turning around to look back at me.

"I went back into the house and then came out with my brother and sister Mary to go to the police station. I saw the fellow standing across the street near Gus Brown's store. One of his hands was in his pocket and he was still watching me.

"Then my mother called to me from the doorway and told me not to leave the street. Officer Lonergan came out once more and followed the man."

IMPORTS THROUGH HUB SHOW BIG INCREASE

Imports into Massachusetts Customs district, chiefly through Boston, during the month of April were valued at $27,161,110, as against $20,336,410 in the same month a year ago. Duties collected showed an increase of almost a million dollars during the same month. They amounted to $4,427,886.63 this year as against $3,514,146.10 a year ago.

Imports during the ten months of the current fiscal year showed a gain of more than $23,000,000 in value over the same period a year ago and duties jumped to $47,830,-359.41 as against $37,636,957.16 a year ago.

MAN SHOT IN GANG FIGHT AT SOUTH END

Shots and the uproar of a gang fight attracted police to the front of No. 212 Dover street, but when they got there the persons participating in the altercation had fled. Later, police say, James Donlan of No. 203 Broadway, South End, was given surgical treatment for a laceration over the right eye, caused by a bullet crease.

Police arrested Antonio Garuff, 53, of No. 15 Oneida street, South End, who is charged with assault and battery with a pistol with intent to kill Donlan. He was taken to Station 5.

WOMEN'S APPAREL AT HOUSEN'S NOW

A NEW DEPARTMENT

has been added to Housen's store, Tremont place and Washington street. It is on the second floor and presents the latest fashion creations in women's finery.

The last word in feminine finery is presented to milady in the women's fashionable apparel department just added to Housen's store in Temple place and Washington street.

The new department is on the second floor of the building and is connected with the main department. Elevators and stairs connect it with street floor corset, hosiery and underwear stores. There are two entrances, one in Temple place and the other in Washington street.

Excellent lighting is a feature of the new shop. Windows in front and on both sides, together with up-to-the-minute fittings give the shop a smart appearance. Coats and dresses of the latest modes will be sold in the new department.

Move to Lessen Graduation Dress Cost

Haverhill, May 5.—A committee formed to arrange for the reduction of girls' expenses in connection with the coming high school graduation here submitted its report. It calls for four inches below the bend of the knee for the skirt, some sleeve, no ornaments, no hats at senior tea, same dress for the banquet and tea, and another dress for both the alumni dance and graduation exercises, and the option of any color shoes.

NORGE REACHES VADSO; RESUMES TRIP FRIDAY

Copenhagen, May 5 (U.N.S.)—The airship Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth Polar expedition arrived at Vadso, Norway, today. The Norge left Leningrad yesterday on its way to Spitzbergen. It is expected to take off for the remainder of its journey tomorrow, weather permitting.

WOMEN TALK ON IMMIGRATION

The statement of W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of United States Department of Labor, that Congress is likely to make the immigration laws more restrictive is being discussed with interest today by Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and other local Americanization leaders.

Mr. Husband in discussing the subject at the Americanization conference at the State House, under direction of the State Board of Education, said: "It would not be strange if Congress makes the immigration laws more restrictive. It probably will be many years before the immigration laws become less restrictive. This is due to the inability of the United States to prudently assimilate an unlimited number of immigrants from any particular country."

Mrs. Thayer caused much laughter when she told of some of her experiences as director of the division of immigration and Americanization of the State Board of Education. She told of an immigrant asking her to find a wife for him. Miss Edna Philips of the library division told of a somewhat similar request.

COURT TO PROBE TOY STORE RECEIVERSHIP

Declaring that the receivership of the late Mrs. Nellie A. Boutwell, the only so-called toy magnate in New England and the proprietress of a large toy store in Worcester, is in a "highly unsatisfactory state," Federal Judge George W. Anderson appointed former Assistant U. S. Attorney Francis C. Goodale of this city a special master to investigate "summarily."

GLOUCESTER HOSE TRUCK IN COLLISION

Gloucester, May 5.—A hose truck, owned by the Gloucester fire department and driven by Eugene Robishaw, was in collision at Railroad avenue and Prospect street, with a truck owned by the Merchants' Box and Cooperage Company and driven by Lawrence Powers of No. 50 Centennial avenue. The latter truck was somewhat damaged, and both men were shaken.

IN COURT 40 TIMES, HE'S GIVEN 2 MONTHS MORE

Traveling the road of the pitcher a month, His offenses included assault, drunkenness and making threats.

Had he been satisfied to accept the sentence of one month imposed in South Boston for assault upon Ursula Sados, his record would have been only slightly besmirched. However, he appealed, and Chief Justice Hall, after looking over the records, added two months more for good measure.

SCHOOLBOY FINDS HIS MOTHER DEAD

Mrs. Mildred Hall of No. 41 Blickensturff street, Back Bay, was found dead on a couch in the living room of her home when her son Thomas, 16, returned from school. Her husband Emerson R. Hall, who is employed as a chauffeur on night duty, was asleep in another room of the suite at the time and summoned a doctor when he was awakened by his son. Death was ascribed to natural causes by Medical Examiner Leary.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 35-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

SUIT BY KILLION EXPECTED BY GAUTEAUME

That he anticipates being sued for alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Sidney Dowsley Killion, of Newton, by the latter's husband, Louis J. Killion, civil engineer of Boston, was admitted by Henri D. A. Gauteaume, in his testimony in the divorce suit on trial in Middlesex Probate Court, and which was instituted by Mrs. Killion.

Mrs. Killion, who is the daughter of the late Dr. John F. Dowsley, chairman of the State Board of Registration in Dentistry, charges her husband with cruelty. She asks the custody of their three children and alimony. The husband is contesting her action.

Gauteaume, immaculately clad, and with a smile on his face, was the centre of the courtroom interest when he took the stand.

Stating that he had no personal reason for his preference, he admitted that his sympathies were with Mrs. Killion in her suit.

His denial saying that he was going to give Killion $20,000 so that he would not contest the divorce Gauteaume admitted that he knew of an agreement between Killion and his wife to live together again, and that part of that agreement was that Mrs. Killion keep away from him (Gauteaume).

"But you did see Mrs. Killion after she and her husband had made this agreement?" queried counsel.

"Oh yes, I did all right," replied the witness.

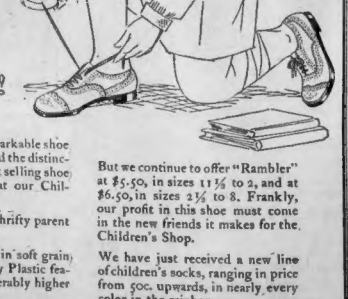
"66 Rambler 99" at $5.50

The good news is spreading!



"RAMBLER," our remarkable shoe for girls, has earned the distinction of being the fastest selling shoe we have ever offered at our Children's Shop.

And it doesn't take a thrifty parent long to see why.

For this modish shoe in soft grain leather with its healthy Plastic features could sell considerably higher and be a sound value.

But we continue to offer "Rambler" at $5.50, in sizes 11½ to 2, and at $6.50, in sizes 2½ to 8. Frankly, our profit in this shoe must come in the new friends it makes for the Children's Shop.

We have just received a new line of children's socks, ranging in price from 50c. upwards, in nearly every color in the rainbow.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Russian Concert Given to Aid Suffering Countrymen in Near East

SOFTLY PLAINTIVE RUSSIAN balalaika music, played by picturesquely garbed Muscovites, was the chief d'oeuvre of a Russian concert staged by and for Russians, and incidentally to show Bostonians what a variety of talents this versatile people possesses.

NO. 46 BEACON STREET and its handsomely panelled ballroom was the scene and Prince Toumanoff and his balalika playing band were roundly applauded. Quite distinctly Russian were they—wearing turquoise green belted smocks and tall Russian boots.

THE PRINCE himself, leader, was distinguished by a richly embroidered white smock, and Madame Anna Calk, sole feminine member of the band, wore a native costume of rose pink satin with the exquisitely beaded headdress of her native land.

PRINCESS TOUMANOFF, her stately height set off by softly tinted mauve draperies, was the mistress of ceremonies, introducing various of the numbers to a highly appreciative audience which more than filled the ballroom.

REPRESENTATIVES OF the smart set and representatives of the distinguished Russians who make up the local Russian colony were in attendance. Mrs. Ouspensky, wife of Captain Mitchail Ouspensky, was handsome in her sequined gown which glinted the peacock colors.

AND NONE in the audience was more distinguished or handsomer than Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, her regal good looks enhanced by gossamer black lace and a velvet wrap tinted in softest lilac. Mrs. Bird's group had table near the performers.

INTERESTED AND interesting was the group including Mr. Constantine Belash and his fiancee, Miss Janet Bartol, daughter of Dr. John Bartol and Mrs. Bartol of Chestnut street. Mr. Belash is a prominent member of our Russian colony, and his betrothal to Miss Bartol unites an ancient Russian line with a family of notable Boston lineage.

FOR THE CONCERT Miss Bartol wore a dance frock of sea-green velvet. Her younger sister Miss Ann Bartol, was in primrose yellow. At a nearby table Miss Helen and Miss Carol Paine were the younger members of a large group.

MISS FRANCES HOWELL, fresh from Vincent Club triumphs (she played with much dash and finish the part of M. Renaud, French dress shop proprietor transplanted to Boylston street) applauded the Russians in a most becoming black frock.

ANOTHER CLEVER Vincentite was Miss Anna Hubbard, distinctly attractive in her frock of pale gray crepe, a posy of bright roses poised at one shoulder. Miss Hubbard, Miss Betty Soule in maize yellow and Miss Eleanor Mason in gold cloth were young set members attending the Russian affair.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM DEFORD BEAL, the handsome Mrs. Beal in rose velvet, had a party at this delightful concert of Russian artists, just nearby the group including among its masculine contingent Mr. Joseph F. Woods.

A CENTRAL FIGURE in the entertainment, Mrs. Nicholas Cushakoff, as manager, was becomingly attired out in black velvet, strikingly designed in a sunburst of glinting iridescent beads and sequins. She it is on whom the duties of general stage management devolved.

GREAT PRAISE is hers and her compatriots as well—for this excellent entertainment. Much applauded numbers were many—Leon A. Varcanian, at the piano, Paul A. Cherkassky with his violin, the is a Symphony player), and the Russian mazurka by Miss Cook, among them.

THAT SOME 5,000 disabled Russians, now living in the Near East, may be properly cared for is the prime object of the concert—that Russians of high degree now living in Boston may send to their less fortunate countrymen a little of the cheer of life to help them on their way.

PRINCESS TOUMANOFF'S little speech about these unfortunates, for the most part entirely disabled from their war service with Czarist and later White forces, was a touching little appeal. Russians in many lands are banded together to help.

TESTIMONIAL TO OFFICERS

A reception was tendered Israel Goldberg and Joseph Herskowits, president and vice-president of the Agudath Israel Congregation of Mattapan, as a testimonial to their interest and work for the many Jewish organizations in Dorchester and Mattapan. Dinner was served in the vestry of the temple.

They issued a call for a conference at which a Union of Orthodox Congregations of Dorchester and Mattapan was formed. It will be known as the branch of the national organization of synagogues.

Isadore Fox acted as toastmaster. Addresses were made by Hyman Bauiman, M. Gorin, Isadore Wintman, Morris Binder, S. Berger and Abraham Alpert.

Among those to play leading roles of the annual musical comedy, "The Talk of Broadway," staged by the combined Revere Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations next Wednesday night in Revere City Hall, is Baby James, a five-year-old singer, buck and wing and eccentric dancer.

Louis Edward Rubin, a student at Tech, will handle the lighting effects, assisted by Benjamin Alpert.

GIRL SCOUTS OF WORLD HERE

Approximately fifty delegates to the International Convention of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides arrived here today at India Wharf, aboard the New York, of the Eastern Steamship Lines. All countries of the world are represented in the gathering, which includes several titled women.

After the convention here the delegates will go to Cedar Hill, where a three-day rally will be held. The New York arrived here from New York.

FIRE DAMAGES SHOE PLANT AT BRAINTREE

Braintree, May 5.—Fire and water did considerable damage in the G factory of the Rice & Hutchinson shoe plant on Pearl street, South Braintree. The fire broke out shortly after the workers left for the day and the fire department authorities think the cause was due to an electric machine.

Smoke was rolling out of the upper stories of the factory when firemen arrived and they had a fight of more than two hours before the fire was extinguished.

Drifting, drifting, always drifting! Dangerous shores are near for a Boston wife. She does not see them. Her real story is told in "WIVES ADRIFT," beginning next Monday in the Boston American.

WOMAN HUNTED IN BLACKMAIL ATTEMPT

Police Silent on Identity of Suspect in Guild "Death Letter" Mystery

Adding to the mystery of the blackmail note demanding $100,000 from Mrs. Curtis Guild, wife of former Governor Guild, the police today slammed the lid on all information.

While they were keeping mum, it was learned that they are trailing a Back Bay woman, who was formerly with the Curtis household and who is now missing from the city.

The woman discussed the affairs of the Guild home with a man in Harvard square, Cambridge, it was learned. She has many friends and family connections in that city.

The trap laid by the police to catch the writer of the note, when Policewoman Irene McAuliffe, dressed to resemble Mrs. Guild, loitered out when the tryst near the Army Base was not kept.

Miss McAuliffe carried a package filled with strips of paper and waited for the blackmailer to appear. The woman evidently took fright, however, and fled from the city when she found that the police were on her trail.

START TO IMPROVE STREET IN ASHMONT

The first street in the so-called "backward" class to be placed in first class condition with a permanent surface will be Windsor street in the Ashmont section, running from Mellon street to Ashmont street, it was announced by the street commissioners.

The work will cost about $6,500, half the amount being borne by the abutters.

LUFKIN'S REPORT SHOWS HUB IMPORTS INCREASING

Figures made public by Collector W. W. Lufkin in charge of this customs district show that the valuation of imports at Boston are steadily increasing, month by month. In April merchandise to the value of $31,161,110 was entered at the ports of the district, with Boston getting the vast preponderance, against $29,356,410 in April of last year.

HARBOR BRIDGE BILL ARGUED

The Senate Ways and Means Committee today resolved into executive session to consider arguments on the bill for a toll bridge across the harbor to East Boston.

Opposition to the bill was led by James E. Maguire of East Boston, on the ground that the bridge would be a detriment to that district. He also objected to the toll provision, inasmuch as other bridges in the State are free.

General Edward L. Logan, one of the incorporators of the bridge corporation, argued in favor of the bill, pointing out that it affords an additional artery of transportation, affecting in no way present modes of communication.

VETERANS OF 3 WARS TO BE MOTHERS' DAY GUESTS

Veterans of the Civil, Spanish and World Wars from the Chelsea Old Soldiers' Home, Marine Hospital, West Roxbury State Hospital and Mattapan State Hospital, will be the guests at Mothers' Day exercises on the Common, Sunday afternoon.

The exercises will be under the direction of the Volunteers of America. Five hundred Gold Star mothers are expected to attend.

Speakers include Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, the State's first Congresswoman, and Colonel Percy A. Guthrie of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. Governor Fuller and Mayor Nichols will greet the Gold Star mothers.

NANTASKET ROLLER COASTER COMPANY SUED

Brockton, May 6—Hearing before a Superior Court jury was opened here today of suits against a roller coaster company of Nantasket, and Charles N. Grant and officials of the company, amounting to $50,000. The suits are the result of an accident last Summer. John T. Gibbons of Hingham, who had both legs broken in the accident, was the first witness. Other plaintiffs are Mrs. Margaret C. Micheau of this city, John Burke, Annie Delorey, George C. Berry, M. Bernice Berry, Andru Burke and John T. Gibbons, all of Hingham.

MANCHESTER CITIZENS TO HONOR DEAD PRIEST

Manchester, N. H., May 6—Citizens of Manchester will unite Friday in paying tribute to the memory of the Rev. Dr. John J. Lyons, a priest for 48 years and rector of St. Anne's Church for 37 years, who died at the home of his sister, here.

Mayor Arthur E. Moreau issued a special request calling for the suspension of all business in the city during the hours of the funeral, from 10:30 o'clock until 11 o'clock noon, tomorrow.

Dies at Desk

Stricken with heart trouble while seated at his desk on the 10th floor of the Scollay building at No. 40 Court street, Herbert W. Hayes, 65, of No. 1213 Beacon street, Brookline, agent for several steel mills, died before any business associates in nearby offices were aware of his sudden sickness.

HUB YOUTH IN METROPOLITAN FILM FEATURE

"Fascinating Youth" Will Also Have Lawrence Girl in Cast

A year ago unknown, Thelma Todd of Lawrence and Claud Buchanan of Boston will come to the screen of the Metropolitan Theatre on Sunday, May 16, heralded as stars of the silent drama.

They are two of the sixteen youths selected from all over America as promising material for the screen stars of the future, and who recently completed their course of training at the Famous Players-Lasky Paramount school for stars, located at the Long Island studios. Selected from among millions, they entered the school last Summer, and, after a rigorous course of training, which included study of voice, carriage, gesture, fencing, general physical culture and all the other essential properties of a motion picture star, they were graduated, and, together with their school fellows, made a picture, "Fascinating Youth."

In "Fascinating Youth," they are supported, paradoxically enough, by several of the most famous stars of the industry. These latter include Adolphe Menjou, Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Clara Bow and Percy Marmont. Norval Baptie and Gladys Lamb, world's champion skaters, also appear in several sequences.

The Cinderella aspects of fate which has lifted them from obscurity and raised them to starred roles within a brief twelve months must be apparent to everyone. But luck as a matter of fact, played very little part in their astonishing rise; their present position is simply the goal that they have been striving for during this time.

HANDIWORK AT EXPOSITION

The North, the East, the South and the West have contributed their bits of handiwork to the home decoration contest to be conducted during the Home Beautiful week Building Trades' Exposition this week in Mechanics Building.

Maine will have representation from Bangor and the town of Union. From these places will be seen woven rugs and knitted childs' bed spreads.

Massachusetts also has several entries, with Roxindale being particularly represented by an array of silk quilts, crocheted table runners, velvet pads, crocheted pillows and numerous other articles, including a unique leather table centerpiece.

Exhibits are arriving daily now and many other states will be represented before the final award is made.

'WIVES ADRIFT,' BIG SERIAL OF BROKEN LOVE

Boston Evening American Offers Readers Rare Treat Beginning Next Monday

Should a wife mention every little thing to her husband, such as—well she meets a strange man through a woman friend and they go to the man's Boston hotel apartment to get better acquainted over a cocktail or two?

This new wife, Charlotte Manning, really wanted to tell her husband of an afternoon's adventures, but Phyllis Fenway, who had been chosen by Dave Manning to steer his country bride in the ways of city life, said, "Nay."

Listen to the two women discuss the matter:

Phyllis gave a little shriek.

"Ah, my dear, no. Don't dare mention at home that you have been in his apartment this afternoon, having drinks with Phil and me. Husbands are so stupid and they never understand little innocent things like this. Dave or Dick would be sure to make a mountain out of a molehill."

PERPLEXED.

Charlotte wrinkled her brow in perplexity.

"I don't think it was exactly proper for us to go to Mr. Brenner's apartment," she confessed, "but since we did, I'd rather tell Dave about it. I am not a bit good at deception and I'd be sure to let something slip about it. Anyway it seems only fair."

"Don't be a silly outfrom little goose," Phyllis counseled her. "The less husbands know the better, as you will find out when you have been married as long as I have. I never tell anything at home," she added with a chuckle.

All the way home, Charlotte thought about the events of the afternoon. She was puzzled and disturbed. Manning had turned her over to Phyllis and said that Phyllis would show her the way about. Charlotte understood that she was to copy Phyllis as nearly as possible.

MANY ESCORTS.

Here's what happened to Charlotte after she had been married some months:

She soon found that Manning, in took her dutifully to all the parties, invariably vanished with Fenway and a few other bored husbands for a little game of cards in a quiet nook; or sometimes, if the dance were a late one, he laughingly turned her over to a younger escort and, pleading the day's work, went home to bed.

So gradually she came to accept and expect the attentions of other men. It ceased to seem strange to be escorted by someone other than her husband; sometimes, she almost forgot that she was married at all, so eager were her partners, so lavish in their admiration.

All this is from "Wives Adrift," a new and thrilling serial of broken love offered to readers of the Boston Evening American. Be sure to begin it in next Monday's American.

VOICING THE GREAT WORKS OF DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

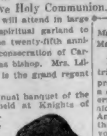
SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

To Pay Big Tribute to Boston Cardinal

By JAMES WALSH

Members of Court John J. Williams, No. 336, Catholic Daughters of America, will attend the 7 o'clock mass next Sunday morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Roslindale, and will receive Holy Communion.

The members will attend in large numbers as a spiritual garland to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the consecration of Cardinal O'Connell as bishop. Mrs. Lillian F. Jackson is the grand regent of the court.



The eighth annual banquet of the court will be held at Knights of Columbus home, Murray Hill road, Roslindale, on Tuesday evening, May 11, at 6:30. Elaborate plans to make this affair one of the outstanding occasions in the history of the court are being made. Many distinguished guests have been invited. Grand Regent Mrs. Jackson has appointed the following committee to have charge of the arrangements.

Miss Lillian M. Hanrahan, past grand regent, chairman, vice-regent; Miss Mary A. McCarthy, Miss M. Lillian Hennessey, Miss Marion Crimmins, Mrs. Agnes T. O'Brien, Miss Clara Hines, Miss Esther Cassidy, Miss Frances Harrington, Miss Mary B. Kirley, Miss Betty Crazy, Mrs. Helen Gilbo, Mrs. Mary Smith, Mrs. Frank Noonan, Mrs. Margaret Adams and Miss Rene Maxa.

Every theatre in Boston will contribute at least one number to the program that has been arranged for a concert to be given on Sunday afternoon in B. F. Keith's Theatre in aid of the building fund of the North American College in Rome. Many of the leading concert artists also have volunteered their services. It is the wish of the present pontiff that the new college that will house students for the priesthood from the United States be erected at this time. The college was founded in 1859 by Pius IX, as the national college of the United States in the Eternal City. More than 100 priests of the Boston Archdiocese are alumni of the college, Cardinal O'Connell is the most distinguished alumnus.

The new building will be erected on land recently acquired on the Janiculum Hill, overlooking the Vatican. It is the highest hill in Rome and one of the seven on which the Eternal City was founded. It is the first time in the sixty-seven years history of the college that it has appealed to the American public for help. The new college buildings will cost in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. The concert on Sunday afternoon is the first of the events that will take place in this archdiocese in connection with the drive for funds.

It is expected that Cardinal O'Connell will be present. The list of patrons and patronesses has not been completed, but it already includes such names as Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, former U. S. Senator David J. Walsh, U. S. Senator William Butler, Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Allen, William C. Prout and many prominent women.

The Rev. Joseph J. Smith is the chairman of the committee in charge. Others are Miss Mildred Crowley, Miss Anna Burns, Miss Evelyn Collins, Miss Elizabeth McNamee, Miss Katherine Alley, Miss Emma Crowley, Miss Margaret O'Connell, Miss Katherine McKenna, Miss Alice Colgan, Miss Mary Aeschelman, Miss Grace Riley, Miss Mary Lavery, Henry C. McKenna, Martin J. Lee, James E. Kennedy, Joseph Flaherty, Harvey E. Landers and William F. A. Graham.

Many prominent people attended the third "get together" banquet of the St. Vincent's Young Men's Club of South Boston in the hall of the Young Ladies' Library, corner of E and Bolton streets, last night. The Rt. Rev. Monsignor George J. Patterson, pastor of St. Vincent's Church, and Mayor Nichols were among the invited guests.

GALLAGHER IS NEW LEADER

Another upheaval in the standing of the contestants has been brought about by the balloting of yesterday in the Boston Evening American's Popularity Contest. A new leader has forged to the front in the person of Jimmy Gallagher and his Checker Inn orchestra, and a close second is found in Clyde McArdle. Both of these orchestras and leaders are regularly heard over WNAC.

Neil Cantor and George Joy, who took the lead away from Sandy MacFarlane yesterday, although still holding strong had to be satisfied with third place, only a shade ahead of jovial Sandy. This is the last week of the contest and all votes must be either received or bear a postmark no later than midnight of Saturday, May 8.

The winner of this popularity contest, in addition to being declared the most popular radio broadcaster in New England, will also be rewarded with a contract calling for a week's engagement at Loew's State Theatre at a very substantial salary. This reward has been arranged by the Boston Evening American with Manager Joseph H. Brennan of the State Theatre.

The votes of both Jimmy Gallagher and Clyde McArdle have been received from a very wide area, hundreds of votes coming from far off places in Northern New England and large numbers of them bearing the postmark of places in Connecticut and Rhode Island. From the present it would seem that the prospective winner might be included in the four leaders of today's tabulation, but this of course is only problematical, as a little effort on the part of any one of at least a dozen candidates can soon overhaul those now in the lead.

The way for you to do in order to express your choice of who is the most popular radio entertainer is to clip the ballot located on this page, fill in the name of the favorite broadcaster and the station from which he or she broadcasts and mail to the Radio Contest Editor, Boston Evening American. It is only through a contest of this sort that the entertainer who gives freely of his time to amuse the masses, can realize just how much his efforts are appreciated. In a word your vote is the equivalent to your applause when expressing your pleasure at a performance at a theatre.

Therefore you owe it to the vast army of broadcasters to show them that they are well received on the air even though they cannot hear the applause. Send in your vote for the one you like best and send it in today.

The vote as it stands today is as follows:

Jimmy Gallagher and Checker Inn Orchestra	2261
Clyde McArdle	2191
Neil Cantor & Geo. Joy	1838
Sandy MacFarlane	1684
Bob Emery	1045
Black Iron Sliners	343
Toots Mondello	221
Buck O'Brien	194
Sagee's Orchestral Players	145
Bay State Quartet	137
Dok Flesnburg	94
Sparkling Diamonds	93
Billy Cotey	85

HERBERT MUSIC TO GO ON AIR

A number of talented artists who are appearing in the presentation of Victor Herbert's musical comedy, "Sweethearts," to be given by the Council of Jewish Juniors Tuesday evening at the Boston Opera House, will appear at Station WNAC, the Shepard Stores, and give a recital of the music in this widely-known musical play.

The loved melodies which make this presentation of Herbert's so popular will be included. The cast of "Sweethearts" includes many of the younger musical singers of the Boston Council, and under the able direction of a committee headed by Alfred Harris, they have been in active rehearsals for the past months.

Just the flavor texture and keeping qualities that women like—

LEADING experts in home cooking—as well as authorities in nutrition—helped to perfect the new White Rose Loaf.

No one knows better than they the kind of bread that particular housewives everywhere have wanted!

That is one reason why White Rose Bread has the satisfying flavor—the firm, even grain—and, above all, the "keeping quality" women like.

A domestic science teacher who has made careful tests of dozens of different brands of bread says of White Rose, "I have never known a loaf to stay fresh so long."

Try White Rose Bread yourself. Notice the difference. Notice its texture — firm and even, like the moist fresh loaves you remember in your childhood. See how much its full, rich flavor adds to each meal.

Your own grocer has White Rose Bread. It comes to you in a blue and white checked wrapper like a fresh tea towel.

It is baked not once but twice each day and rushed to your grocer—to be fragrantly fresh whenever you buy it. Massachusetts Baking Co.

Among the experts who helped to perfect the new White Rose loaf are the heads of two famous cooking schools the nutrition experts of two universities the food editor of a well-known magazine

WHAT THE CONTEST IS

The Boston Evening American's Radio Popularity Contest is a medium through which all radio listeners may DO something for their favorite radio artist.

The artist or group which receives the greatest number of votes is to be given a week's engagement at Loew's State Theatre at a substantial salary. This is naturally a prize quite worthwhile to the artist.

It is a well-known fact that MOST of the radio audience DO NOT send applause cards to their favorite artists.

A vote in this contest is an applause card that your artist will especially appreciate.

Therefore, why not vote? DO IT NOW!

My favorite local radio artist is.....

Send votes to Radio Contest Editor, Boston Evening American.

WOMAN CHOKES AND ROBS SOMERVILLE JEWELER

According to the request of a covered woman, dressed in black, to show her some rings, he was choked and robbed of $50. Alfred Place, Jeweler, at No. 279, Somerville street, Somerville, told the police.

He said that while she was bending over the tray looking at rings she suddenly straightened up, grasped him by the throat and choked him with one hand, while she went through his pockets and obstructed the cash with the other.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY IS FOUND IN HARBOR

The body of a man, who has not been identified, was found floating in the upper harbor by the crew of the police boat Watchman. Medical Examiner Magrath was notified and the body removed to the Northern Mortuary. The man was described as 5 feet 10 inches in height, 210 pounds in weight, and wore a blue sweater, blue overalls, black leather belt and tan shoes.

through California and Arizona. He made clear the Administration's sincere interest in the Boulder Dam project, and its determination to put it through.

The West feels that Calvin Coolidge can and will build the dam, and it will show appreciation in 1928. If Mr. Hughes had had in California such an advance agent as Mr Work, Woodrow Wilson would have missed one term, and history might have been changed considerably. Europe, perhaps, would owe us less money.

NO BETTER NEWS from England, except that the government is said to have conferred, unofficially, with Thomas, head of the Railway Unions, that have tied up the country. Baldwin says "no conference, until the strike is called off." The latest is a threat to call out engineers and firemen from all ships, cutting off Britain from outside food supplies. But union men must eat; that probably would not last.

OTHER COUNTRIES could send ships and food, but many would be afraid of the effect on their own workmen. Europe's workers are closely united in the conviction that labor is right and should rule.

HERE CAPITAL and "things as they are" are protected by lack of homogeneity of race, language and beliefs.

Five million strikers in Britain means five million Britishers, all speaking the same tongue and thinking about the same thoughts from birth. There could be no such unanimity here, where locomotive engineers, for instance, have refused to back other railroad men on strike. Any attempt at a nation-wide labor movement here would construct a house divided against itself.

GREAT BRITAIN'S enemies will be disappointed if they expect this so-called British "revolution" to develop the horrors of other revolutions. The British do not use knives or pistols, and as for bombs, British labor, like British capital, looks upon them with horror.

And professional bomb experts from Russia and other parts of the continent, that have always found a refuge in England where political opinion is but made a crime, will hesitate to close up that "sanctuary."

MR. SAKLATVALA, Parsee gentleman from India, recently barred from this country, for Communistic agitation in London, is much less important than some correspondents think him. But in his native India, ruled by Britishers thousands of miles way, where one hundred thousand Englishmen hold down three hundred million Hindus and Mohammedans, TEN THOUSAND SAKLATVALAS COULD SCARCELY STIR A RIPPLE OF REVOLUTION.

Poor Mr Ghandi, the Asiatic revolutionist, at home, first starves himself, then goes peaceably in a British jail.

One single Parnell transplanted to London can stir up agitation, at least.

To start something, you need the right crowd. It is easy to start a fight among bulldogs, very difficult among sheep.

BERNARD SHAW says Great Britain must take the coal fields, nationalize and operate them, thus cutting out the industrial cancer that causes so much trouble. "Britain's government must have the courage and the financial intelligence to do this," says Shaw.

His suggestion will send a shudder through the rich coal mine owners, for he observes truthfully: "The mine owners themselves will supply money to buy their property, since what they get from the government will be taken from them by collectors of the income tax, the super tax on estates, and duties."

How would high finance in America, which sympathizes so sincerely with itself on the income tax question, feel if it were living in Britain?

OPERATION of coal mines by government under a special branch of civil service may solve this trouble. But no one can tell how far the entering wedge might be driven into the "right of a man to do what he pleases with his own."

More and more that "right" is challenged. Once a man could kill his son if angry with him, for it was his own son. That is changed. Once in Britain a land owner could drive thousands from their farms to make room for a deer forest. It was HIS OWN LAND. He wouldn't dare do that now.

BUT BRITAIN will proceed slowly with nationalization of mines or anything that would be like "backing down" in the face of a labor union threat.

The government acts remembering that the Great Empire in Canada, Africa, INDIA ESPECIALLY, New Zealand, Australia and the rest of the world must believe the British government to be unmoved by fear of threats.

Labor may have to lose this fight, before WINNING it, to save the face of the government. That may mean a long fight.

SUN WARMS UP AND FLOODS MENACE N. E.

Spring came back to Boston today for an indefinite stay. The mercurial column rallied under the rays of the sun and as the effects of the heat waves in West and Northwest began to be felt.

As seasonable weather returned New England rivers reached flood levels and property in several sections was menaced. Lowlands bordering the upper Connecticut were flooded, highways and railroad tracks submerged and traffic interrupted.

Melting snows in northern New Hampshire are feeding the swollen Connecticut, which is reported nine feet above the normal level. Between Mt. Orne, Lancaster and Cone Junction the waters swept over the banks, inundated the Boston & Maine tracks and caused suspension of service on the Whitefield and Groveton branch.

The road from Waterville N. H. to Newfound Lake is under water, as are adjacent fields.

The Merrimack River, after a steady rise of a week is cresting over the Lawrence dam at a height of 79 feet. Tonight's crest will mean has been halted by the current.

Back water which flooded the electric plant caused the American Woolen Mills at Goldtown to shut down the weave room.

JUDGE RECOGNIZES YOUTH FROM OLD HOME TOWN

A remarkable memory for faces enabled Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the Superior Court to enjoy a chat of a few minutes with a friend from the "old home town" in Second Criminal session.

As the Chief Justice was awaiting another case to be brought before him, he asked Court Officer John E. Donovan, what a young man with pompadour hair sitting in the front seat of the spectators' benches was in for?

"I'm just here as a spectators," said the young man.

"Hmm, is that all," said the Justice.

"You live in Fitchburg, don't you?"

The young man answered in the affirmative and he was invited to step up to the end of the bench, where followed a few minutes of personal conversation between the two.

The young man was John Donnahan, a teacher, of No. 234 Massachusetts avenue. He formerly lived in Fitchburg, his home being close to that of the chief justice. As far as Donnahan knows it was the first time Judge Hall had seen him in eight years.

SHEIK THUG TRIO ROB MAN IN OWN DOORWAY

Shortly after 11 o'clock Abraham Gold, 45, of No. 31 Poplar st., West End, was beaten and robbed of $300 in the doorway of his house.

Gold was returning home As he stepped into the doorway three young men who are described as being about 22 and well dressed in the latest collegiate mode, jumped on him and beat him severely Two held his arms and stuffed his own white tie over his mouth to muffle his piercing cries. Two then beat him into unconsciousness and fled.

JAPANSES ENVOY TO BERLIN IS CHOSEN

Tokio, May 6.—It is learned semi officially that Count Hachiro Arai has been selected as Japanese Ambassador to Germany. Official announcement of his appointment is expected pending the formal retirement of Ambassador Hioda at Berlin.

GUNLESS HOLDUP MAN GOT $50 IN ROXBURY

In a gunless holdup Henry Dodge of Blue Hill parkway, Mattapan, reported to the police of Roxbury station he was robbed today of $50 by two colored men who leaped on the running board of his automobile as he drove past Camden street on Washington street, Roxbury. One man leaned on one side and the other on the other side of the car. Dodge reported, and threatened him, demanding his money. He described one as about 35, 6 feet 9 inches, 175 pounds wearing army overcoat and light soft hat. The other was about 45, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 125 pounds, with a dark suit and light cap.

POSSE TRAILING CRAZED THUG

Millville, May 6.—Suspected of continuing his escapades by wounding a man in Cumberland, R. I., holding up a policeman there and stealing an automobile from a garage in this vicinity, Arthur Rembiad, escaped insane asylum inmate, was sought today by an armed posse in the woods where his daytime hiding place is believed to be.

A detail of mounted State troopers was held in readiness at Blackstone all night to move in any nearby spot where the will of the thug who was reported but the theft of the automobile was not discovered, for several hours after it occurred and the shooting in Cumberland was outside Massachusetts jurisdiction.

Patrolman O'Connell of the Cumberland police was riding with James McCaughey of Lincoln and another civilian in search of poultry thieves. He stopped beside a parked sedan and was immediately held up by one of the occupants, who poked two revolvers at him. McCaughey tried to aid the officer leaping at the gunman, and was shot in the throat.

Parole for Slayer

Waterbury, May 6.—Mrs Mabel Kenyon of this town, who shot and killed Dr Herbert Tetlow in his consulting office apartment June 11 1925 may be freed in a few months from Connecticut State Prison, where she has served five and one-half years of a ten to fifteen year term.

CUTS OUT U. S. DEFENSE TEST

Washington, May 6 (A.P.)—Congressional action will be sought by the War Department before any more defence tests are considered.

Plans for a nationwide muster this year have been abandoned.

Officials are considering the advisability of changing the week-end from an annual to a quadrennial basis or conducting them within corps areas according to local seasonal conditions.

Since the first national muster of civilians held at the request of General Pershing in 1924 to commemorate the sixth anniversary of the battle of St. Mihiel, various objections have been raised.

Some have sought to emphasize the military features, while others have urged a peace demonstration.

Sentiment against the date of the 1925 muster to be changed from April 24 to July 4 but a number of governors were against it, to interfere with parades of their National guardsmen and other features which are not antagonistic to the test itself.

1 KILLED, 1 DYING, IN PASSENGER TRAIN CRASH

Nashville, Tenn., May 6 (Universal).—One man was killed outright, one was fatally hurt and two others were badly injured when the Atlanta-Chicago mail express north bound, crashed into a southbound accommodation train at Smyrna, Tenn., 15 miles from here.

R. M. Fulghum, fireman on the southbound train was killed, and William McKeand, engineer on the southbound train, is dying Failure of the brakes on the southbound train is blamed for the accident.

Hurt in 10 Foot Fall

Brockton, May 6.—Eugene Gingras, 49, of this city, is in Brockton Hospital under observation for possible internal injuries as a result of his falling 16 feet from a staking while working on a house on Monson street.

LYNN YOUTH HELD FOR HOUSE BREAKING

George E. Henley, 16, alleged to have been an intimate of the three Reading youths involved in the slaying of Patrolman Phelan, Comeau was arraigned in the Lynn court on a charge of breaking into the home of William W. George, No 84 Walnut street Lynn, and stealing $3. Judge Ross ordered him held in $500 bonds for the Grand Jury. Henley was unable to get bail and was taken to the Salem jail.

HUB BOYS ON HARVARD 1926 STUDENTS COUNCIL

Two Greater Boston boys were included among the five Harvard students who were elected to the 1926 Student Council at Harvard. Five students were chosen, three juniors and two sophomores. The juniors chosen were Joseph F. Barnes of Hartford, Conn., and Grant of Rosemont, Pa., and Henry S. Wood Bridge of Brookline. The sophomores elected were Henry W. Bingham of New York City and Robert Williams of Boston.

Emphasizing quality and workmanship We found a manufacturer of very fine bordered silks who had a large stock on hand and was a little apprehensive of the market. We wanted to buy these silks at a price, he was willing to take a tremendous loss, and by paying a few cents more a yard than his low price, we secured only the best colors and best patterns, enough to make up 600 dresses. We then selected the season's successful models in dresses, had them made up especially to our own order in our own workrooms, and by one of our best manufacturers, all under our personal supervision. Result—instead of pricing them $25, $30 and $35, which such quality material, beautiful colors and splendid workmanship call for, they are priced very low at 18.50.

Prince Albert Victor (right) and Prince George of Wales (now King George). These Princes were the apple of Victoria's eye. She refers to them frequently in her letters.

RUMBLINGS of another war! This time between France and Prussia! The greatest war of the century!

Who is to blame? France! French arrogance! It is the voice of Europe that answers.

But Europe is completely fooled.

It is the hidden hand of Bismarck luring Napoleon III. to his doom

Queen Victoria is deceived along with the rest of Europe. She sees only Napoleon's fatal mistake in making a final excessive demand on Prussia. She does not know that the road to war has been craftily paved by the Iron Chancellor of Prussia.

In today's instalment of "The Letters of Queen Victoria," which the Boston Evening American is publishing with the permission of King George of England, not only the Queen, but her daughter, the Crown Princess of Prussia, and all the members of the Prussian Royal family show themselves in their written impressions of the impending conflict to be in total ignorance of Bismarck's machinations.

Bismarck so inflames public opinion in both France and Germany that the declaration of war by France becomes inevitable.

DEAREST MAMA—By Leopold of Hohenzollern's renunciation of the Spanish Crown today all pretext for war on the part of France is removed. It must be admitted that my Father has acted in an upright and honorable manner and has shown his decided love of peace.

Napoleon must now show his cards and prove whether war is necessary for him, or whether he is content to do without bloodshed. Should fresh demands be made upon us, however, he will meet with a unanimous expression of German feeling and anger that will cost him dear.

May God grant that peace may

Little Rock, Ark., May 6 (A.P.).—Four of the leading balloonists in the 1926 national elimination race bettered the winning distance in last year's event at St. Joseph, Mo., which was 845 miles, and Ward T. Van Orman, the winner, surpassed the best flight of the 1925 international Gordon Bennett race, 640 miles. All surpassed the 325-mile record for bags of 35,000 cubic feet capacity. All but two passed Captain H. E. Honeywell's 1925 second place distance of 542 miles and all passed the third place record, 342 miles, of Lieutenant William J. Flood. Van Orman's Goodyear IV. covered 848 miles.

LAW, ORDER HEAD FOR PENSIONS

President Believes Immediate Action Is Wanted by the Public

By D. W. HARRINGTON
President Law and Order League

I take pleasure in adding the name of the Law and Order League to the list of organizations that favor the passage of the bill sponsored by the Boston Evening American, known as the Casey-Thomas-Boston Evening American bill

The passage of this bill would protect from poverty the families of our policemen and firemen who are maimed or killed in the performance of their sworn duty.

Although the public has always responded generously when called upon to contribute to a fund that would help the dependents of heroes who make the supreme sacrifice, it is not pleasant for men who are constantly risking their lives in line of duty to know that in case of death, their dependents are compelled to look for aid from the generosity or charity of the public.

I believe that the majority of citizens strongly favor quick passage of this bill because it is humane, just and has great merit.

The editor of the Boston Evening American in Representatives Casey of Boston and Thomas of Gloucester are performing a real public service in presenting this measure to the Legislature and I sincerely hope that favorable action will be taken on it at once. A bill of this type should not be held up by red tape or a desire of a few members of the House Rules Committee to get home for the Summer.

The following letter from the Selectmen of Cambridge speaks for itself:

Editor Boston Evening American.
Dear Sir,

The members of Local 30 of the Cambridge Fire Department, at a special meeting, voted unanimously to go on record in favor of the Casey-Thomas-Boston Evening American hero pension bill.

This bill, if passed, would encourage the policemen and firemen to perform their hazardous work more efficiently because it would relieve them the feeling that their wives and children would not be humiliated by the notoriety incident to public subscription, if they are killed in the performance of their duty.

Hoping that your worthy paper will continue to champion such worthy causes as it has always done in the past, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
John F. Cronin,
Secretary.

WORLD NEEDS SMALL SERVICES!

THOSE who encourage me to write these bits to you daily say that you like to hear personal episodes out of our daily lives—so different in many respects to yours.

I have already written of my Ileana's passion for "doing things for people."

There are so many ways to serve! Offtimes we are held back from serving, thinking what we can do is too little to count. It is not. The world is in need of a myriad of small services. None is too small, and no one but can find such things to do. We may look afar for chances to serve when right at our elbow are plenty. The "human touch" is all that's necessary.

Our Ileana has the "human touch." All with whom she comes in contact interest her—her servants, her teaching masters and mistresses, her friends, each casual acquaintance, even the man in the street. For all of these she desires to put herself and her resources into service.

When a little girl she had a teacher with whom she was very fond—a poor little woman whose life had never been sweetened by good luck. Crippled by a crooked family, she had been the bearer of their burdens, working herself to death and receiving scanty thanks.

She gave good lessons and Ileana enjoyed them. But aside from that, the child became passionately interested in the welfare of the unlucky little woman, who had never had anyone to love or help her—she was amongst the "sacrificed" ones of this world.

Ileana conceived the idea that if the little woman could have a real rest, good food, fresh air and some enlivening company she would brighten out into happiness. So she proposed that I let her spend her Summers in our country house, which I gladly did.

My daughter's next move was to make the acquaintance of the little teacher's relations—nephews, nieces, cousins, uncles and god-children of all sorts and conditions! They and their affairs became her personal interests, and the poor little teacher experienced something she had never before dreamed of—a feeling that she was not a solitary figure in a world of hard work and small appreciation.

A long and painful illness finally set in and Ileana stuck to the very end, bringing what light she could.

Almost daily she visited her, kept a nurse for her, presenting the family from victimizing her, carried her flowers and good things to eat, and for two years showed her kindness.

When death came, Ileana arranged the funeral. And now she looks after the graves.

These little things are what Christ encouraged.

Former Squantum Commander Hopes to Beat Frenchman Across Atlantic

Washington, May 6.—An American entered the "[illegible]" for the prize of $25,000 offered to the first flyer to complete a flight from Paris to New York when Lieutenant-Commander Noel Davis, Harvard law graduate, admitted that reports of his plans were a bit premature.

The chief of the Naval Reserve declined to give out any of his plans saying that thus far the flight is the "merest idea." But he added that he might have something to announce in a week or so.

Lieut. Commander Davis will beat Captain Rene Fonck, French flyer, to a hop-off, according to reports here. The French airman plans to make the attempt in the Spring or Summer of next year, but it is understood, that the American plans an earlier start.

The former commander of the Naval Air Station at Squantum refused to discuss his plans at the present time, but it is possible here that they are nearing completion. He made it plain he would make his trans-Atlantic flight attempt as an individual and not as a naval officer.

Born in Salt Lake City 34 years ago, Davis was educated there and then entered the Naval Academy and has been in the service 14 years. During the World War he was aide to Admiral Straus in the North Sea and after the Armistice was in charge of picking up mines laid in the North Sea. This work completed he resigned from the navy and took a law course at Harvard.

On graduation Davis went to Washington and was placed in charge of naval reserve activities.

The prize of $25,000 was offered by Richard Oneig of New York in 1919 after the American NC boats had gone from Rockaway, N. Y., to the Azores. Although the offer was for five years, Mr. Orteig, in 1925 extended it.

MARLBORO PRIEST HURT IN WORCESTER AUTO CRASH

Worcester, May 6.—Crashing into a truck on Belmont hill when a steering mechanism of his auto ran out of order, Rev. Peter Vassilakos of the Greek Orthodox church of Marlboro was seriously injured today. He was extricated from the wreckage of his car by police and taken to City hospital, where he was found to be suffering from multiple cuts and bruises, besides a fracture of the right knee. Vassilakos rushed his car down a steep hill into the path of a truck driven by Thomas Fitzgerald of this city. The priest was driving up the hill toward the downtown district.

President of the Law and Order League, Inc., is a strong booster for the bill to award pensions to dependents of firemen and policemen killed in performance of duty.

3 WOUNDED IN BATTLE WITH CONVICTS

Leonore, Ill., May 6 (A.P.).—One convict, a business man and a policeman were wounded here today when officers and visitors attempted to restore law and order in a riot started by convicts after mailing of a deputy warden.

The wounded, all of whom were taken to the prison hospital, included Richard Hunter, prisoner; Jesse Neal, who is Dr. Harry M. Neal's brother-in-law, and Herbert Boh, one of the guards. The latter had a broken leg and buckshot wounds in the body.

Robert Lorenz, one of the four survivors of the fight, was captured, the other three escaping after a running fight with the posse. An organized search was in progress today throughout the territory, which is about fifty miles Southwest of Statesville.

Seven convicts, five of them serving murder sentences, escaped from the prison after killing Peter W. Kain, the assistant warden, and wounding a guard and Lorenz. They escaped in the warden's auto.

Two of the seven separated from their companions not far from Marion. The other five continued in the car until a car mobile got into the way. There the auto, wedged and jailed in a ditch. The five then on foot in the woods. They later encountered a farmer with a shotgun. He took away his weapon and rescued Lorenz. He then buried his body and called out the police.

INJURED, IN COMA 240 HOURS

Case of a Shrewsbury Man Puzzles Physicians Who Are Studying Patient

Worcester, May 6.—Unconscious for ten days after falling 25 feet from a roof on which he was working, Alexander Henderson, 42, a carpenter, of Lake road, Shrewsbury, today presented the strangest case of its kind in the history of Worcester County.

For more than 240 hours, Henderson has lain in a state of coma and all efforts to revive him have failed. His skull is fractured. An operation to remove pressure on the brain was performed following Henderson's fall. The operation was apparently successful and it was expected that the patient would recover.

Physicians studying the case at the bedside can give no reason for the long coma. The case parallels that of Marion T. Ladner, of Brookline street, Worcester, who was unconscious for 160 hours. She recovered.

OPERETTA ON TUESDAY TO AID JEWISH CHILDREN

On next Tuesday evening at the Boston Opera House, Victor Herbert's operetta "Sweethearts" will be presented by the Boston Section, Council of Jewish Juniors. The proceeds from this production will be used towards the establishment and maintenance of a Jewish home for fatherless children. This home, like the Leib Israel Hospital, will be non-sectarian.

Headed by Executive Chairman Alfred Harris with Adam Silverman production chairman, Cecil Holmquist, vice chairman, Harry M. Plish program chairman, Eugene Saidl president of the organization and the other officers Max Nadler treasurer, Father Goldman and Ruth Hermanson, the committee has worked hard to make the affair a success.

REPLIES TO PERSHING ON U. S. WAR MEMORIALS

Denial that France is "fed up" on American war memorials was made in Worcester today by Rev. Fr Gaston Lombard, who is on his way to Boston to confer with American Legion officials regarding the Verdun memorial. Fr Lombard who comes here tomorrow as the official representative of the French government is a famous war chaplain in the several battles for heroism. He asserted he was shocked on learning of General Pershing's declaration in America's memorials in France.

RUNAWAY LOGS AT BOOM NEAR TURNERS FALLS

Turners Falls, May 6 A.P.).—The head of a runaway drive of logs that broke away from the White River at about 11 o'clock this morning, owned by the Turners Falls Realty Company, the narrows of the Connecticut river and two miles above the dam at this place. Indications were that the 4 000 cords of wood valued at over $50,000 had been scattered by the flood conditions in the river, as the first arrival of wood was light and was the test of the ability of the new boom to hold the logs in check.

Florence Vidor to Star in 'The Great Gatesby'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—Listening to conversations on a studio set frequently pays, especially to a movie columnist. For instance, if I had not called on Florence Vidor I might not have learned she is leaving for New York as soon as "Love Magic" is completed, to play the leading role in "The Great Gatesby."

YES, Famous Players-Lasky at last obtained the film right to the Scott Fitzgerald story and Herbert Brenon is happy. Principally because after reading the book and seeing the play he decided it was the one picture he wanted to direct and he will be given that chance as a lead [illegible] man is concerned.

Florence Vidor

Can't you just see Adolphe Menjou as Gatesby. I can, and I am sorry "The Ace of Cads," his next picture, interferes. If promises to the exhibitors can be arranged, it might be a good thing for Famous Players-Lasky to give Menjou the role.

This, by the by, will be the first time Miss Vidor has made a picture at the Paramount studios on Long Island, or at any studio in the East for that matter.

ONCE again Fred Niblo has been called in on a picture that has already been started. This time it is "The Temptress," which had been commenced with M. Stiller, the Swedish director at the helm. Mr. Niblo did as well as he did Doc Yak with Ben Hur that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer powers that be have decided to let him carry on with the Ibanez story. Of course "The Temptress" was only just begun so it will not be a long drawn out affair like "Ben Hur," which became almost historical in the endeavor to get it finally on the screen. Antonio Moreno and Greta Garbo were both on the M. G. M. set so no time was lost in transit.

Fred Niblo

CLAIRE WINDSOR has been patiently waiting to hear what has been chosen for her next picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. She told me that while she is eager to be at work it would be nice if the decision would be delayed long enough to give her a chance to go with Bert Lytell on location while he is filming "The Lone Wolf" for Columbia Pictures. I am afraid Claire will not have her wish for Irving Thalberg, production boss at M. G. M., told me that Rachel Crothers' play, "Little Journey," had been selected for Claire. Lew Cody also will have an important

8 NEW FLIERS ON B. & M.

The Boston & Maine Railroad and its connections are to be congratulated upon their new International as well as National train service, as follows:

The two new trains the "Red Wing" and the "Alouette" are operated between Boston, Montreal and Quebec via the Boston & Maine, Canadian Pacific and Quebec Central Railway.

The two new trains, the "Ambassador" and the "New Englander," which are operated via the Boston & Maine Central Vermont Canadian National Railway between Boston and Montreal.

The two new trains, the "Mount Royal" and the "Green Mountain Flyer" which are operated between Boston and Montreal via Boston & Main, Rutland Railroad and Canadian National Railway.

Then there are the two new trains the Pine Tree Limited and the Flying Yankee between Boston and Portland.

FISHING RIPE IN THE NORTH

We are advised by the Maine Central Railroad that the following lakes and ponds are clear of ice and open for fishing: Sebago, Kezar, Maranacook, Crystal, Moose, McGraw, Great Pe[illegible], River (Bangor Pool), Long Lake, Anasagunticook, Cobbosseecontee.

The lower end of Lake Messalonskee is clear of ice and it is expected that the entire lake will be clear within ten days.

If you are interested in fishing in Maine send ten cents in stamps to cover mailing of literature to the Boston Evening American Hotel and Travel Bureau, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston.

MANY ACADIANS IN P. E. ISLAND

It was in 1663 that Prince Edward Island was first settled by the Acadians from the neighboring colonies of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, then called Acadia.

The very first settlers were peasants from Brittany, Picardy and Normandy, and later there came shiploads of English, Scotch and Irish settlers, each group locating in a particular locality.

Today descendants of these pioneers are still grouped in their original home sites with the inherent habits, customs and belongings of their forebears. It is not an unusual thing in the course of an hour's motor trip, to pass from a typical "hameau" of an Acadian settler, where spinning wheels whir, flax is spun and men get their living from the sea, to a miniature Scotch village full of "Macs," where Gaelic is still spoken and the morning porridge and oat cakes are as common as in Auld Scotia, then through a typical Johnny Bull cast and the farm lands laid out as meticulously as are those of Kent, Devon and Somerset.

To illustrate how the original strain still predominates in the different districts, census records show that at Egmont Bay twenty-three out of twenty-six at North Rustico forty-seven out of fifty-eight, and at Oyster Bed Bridge forty-three out of forty-nine are Acadians, while at Bristol, Freetown, Kensington, Northam, West Devon, Cornwall, Little York, Milton and other places the population is almost entirely English.

At New Glasgow, Bonshaw, Brudenell, Caledonia, Clyde River, Belfast, Vernon River, Wood Islands the population is strictly Scotch, and at Howlan, Kinkora, Tyrone, Iona and Kelly's Cross, the Irish strain predominates.

There are very picturesque encampments of Micmac Indians—descendants of the original settlers—at Lennox Island and Rocky Point.

NEW KINGSTON HOTEL

Kingston, N. Y., will honor the memory of George Clinton, the first Governor of New York State, by opening a new community hotel bearing his name, with a four-day ceremony beginning on May 17.

The Governor Clinton which was built and furnished by the citizens at a cost of over $750,000, occupies an ideal site on Albany avenue facing the public park, with a glorious view from the rear windows of the historic hills which make this section of the country a mecca for tourists during the Summer season.

The hotel with its 100 guest rooms and large restaurants is said to be one of the finest examples of modern hotel construction that exists in the country.

The American Hotels Corporation will operate the hotel as a unit in its chain which now consists of twenty hotels.

The first day of the opening celebration, Monday, May 17th, will be marked with a flag raising ceremony, with a parade of patriotic and civic organizations. A daylight fireworks salute to the flag will be a feature. In the evening there will be a formal dinner to the directors of the company, followed by an inspection of the hotel.

I. C. CUTS TIME TO GULF

Announcement is made by Illinois Central Railroad to the effect that the DeLuxe All Pullman "Panama Limited," its outstanding train between Chicago-St. Louis-New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, will, on May 16, 1926, make the run in 21 hours instead of 23 hours.

The train, since its inception, has departed from New Orleans and Chicago at 12:30 noon, and no changes will be made in the time of departure which has proved so popular.

The new time of arrival at Chicago and New Orleans will, however, be changed to 9:30 a. m., a saving of two hours.

One may leave Chicago or New Orleans as the case may be for a morning's business engagement and

On account of the fast schedules and exclusive features, an extra fare will be charged.

On the same date a considerable reduction in time will also be made in the schedules of other through trains.

EXTRA FARE TRAINS FOR CHICAGO-PACIFIC RUN

The Santa Fe Railway announces that in October next they will establish extra fare trains between Chicago and Los Angeles, maintaining a schedule of sixty-three hours in each direction with an extra fare of ten dollars between Chicago and Pacific Coast points.

It is now contemplated that the schedule of this new Santa Fe train will be leaving Chicago 8 p. m. daily, arriving Los Angeles 9 a. m. the third day, and East bound leave Los Angeles 5 or 6 p. m. daily arriving Chicago in time to make the principal important Eastern Railroad connections.

This will mean a saving of the equivalent of a business day in Los Angeles and will be operated "Santa Fe all the Way."

Due to increased business it has been necessary for the Burlington Railroad to enlarge their offices in Boston with the result that they are now located at Room 206 Old South Building, No. 294 Washington street, Boston, Mass. Telephone Liberty 5584.

CONCERT FOR AMERICAN COLLEGE AT ROME

Under the patronage of Cardinal O'Connell, and many leading citizens of Greater Boston, a concert will be held next Sunday afternoon, May 9, in the B. F. Keith's Theatre for the purpose of financially aiding the building fund of the North American College in Rome.

PULLMAN CAR TO FLORIDA

With the change in railroad schedules effective Sunday, April 25, a ten-section Pullman car was placed in operation daily between Boston and Miami on the Federal Express over the New Haven Railroad and Pennsylvania Railroad to Washington, then by the Everglades Limited to Miami via the Atlantic Coast Line.

This car will be operated North bound on the same trains, thus maintaining through Pullman service between Boston and Miami all year 'round with parlor car service between Jacksonville, Tampa, Sarasota, St. Petersburg, west coast and southern Florida.

The Atlantic Coast Line also operates four other daily trains to Florida from New York all year 'round.

"blue water at last"
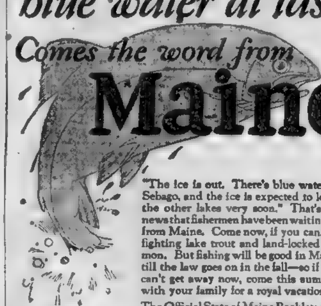
Maine



"The ice is out. There's blue water in Sebago, and the ice is expected to leave the other lakes very soon." That's the news that fishermen have been waiting for from Maine. Come now, if you can, for fighting lake trout and land-locked salmon. But fishing will be good in Maine till the law goes on in the fall—so if you can't get away now, come this summer with your family for a royal vacation.

The Official State of Maine Booklets give just the information you need—suggested motor tours; where to fish or to find every outdoor sport at its best; rates for hotels, camps and farm homes; how to rent a little camp or bungalow in some cool mountain, lake or seashore retreat.

GARCELON OPPOSES NATIONAL CONTROL OF GOLF

M.G.A. HEAD RAPS PLAN OF SOLONS

Abolition of District, State and Sectional Bodies Is a Part of Recommendation

The attempt of the United States Golf Association to [illegible] State and sectional golf bodies and to take over the administration of their functions with respect to the Amateur and Public links championships to be Willam A. Garcelon president of the New England Golf Association and former head of the Massachusetts G. A.

At the annual meeting of the M. G. A. last night in the Boston City Club, Garcelon declared that the proposition to abolish many of the well established organizations in the Massachusetts golf pastime was ill-advised.

"When the New England Golf Association was formed the M. G. A. was behind it in every way and stood by her, was pushed at a disadvantage but Jones, and triumphed.

"The M. G. A. is the leading organization in golf so far as efficiency goes. Its accomplishments in handicapping and in the [illegible] have been stamped with the approval of the foremost authorities.

"The U. S. G. A. couldn't handle the details of the M. G. A. as well as nothing of the many other organizations. Its own job most a hot as complicated as that of the M. G. A. No one I think would stand for the transfer of either of these New England organizations."

Mr. Garcelon is quoted as saying he knows nothing of the reasons leading the driving force behind the U. S. G. A. in all of its contemplated steps in the game. It is true, he says, that many authorities think the U. S. G. A. is out for better golf in general, but better than to move it of capable hands and adopt the methods which have been perfected well in the local organizations.

The M. G. A. officials say that the plan would not change in any organization. This is hard to believe in all the districts would be would mean the complete transference of all golf administration from the local organizations into the hands of the U. S. G. A.

U. S. G. A. Plans to Abolish District Golf Bodies

Cleveland, O., May 6 (A.P.)—Abolition of district, state and sectional golf bodies and administration of their objectives by the United States Golf Association is a plan being submitted to associations throughout the country. The plan would reduce cost of the game for members of private clubs as well as eliminate many of the competitive complications.

The plan is an enlargement of the activity to organize seventeen green sections as centres to cover the nation's clubs, all working under the supervision of the U. S. G. A. Its beginning is seen in the method chosen for qualifying players for the national open three centres being located in the seventeen cities which will become central offices.

The U. S. G. A. would then run all tournaments, saving clubs the cost of belonging to more than one organization. The plan would not vitally change any organization.

C.A.C. IN WAR ON RING STARS

Putting up the bars against boxing headliners, who demand enormous guarantees to fight "set-ups," the Commercial A. C. of Boston through Eddie Mack, matchmaker, has fallen into step with Tex Rickard, New York promoter. Refusing to listen to the holdups of boxing managers, the local club is following Rickard's policy of staging all-star shows rather than to book matches in which a headliner meets a soft opponent and receives big money for an easy fight.

Failing to secure the consent of stars of the ring to meet worthy opponents, Eddie Mack has clinched what looms as the greatest all-star show booked in the Hub in many months. The show is carded at Mechanics Building, Thursday evening, May 13.

INSIDE GOLF
By CHESTER B. BOSTON

One of the oldest ways to get the feeling of how the club head will do its work during a swing, if you properly direct it, is to take a rule of letting the left arm straighten out toward the hall as the forward swing develops. The arm should not be stiffened out, but the tendency should be to throw the back of your left hand, from the beginning of the down swing, directly at the ball. Then be sure to hold your shoulders up and in place. Don't stoop outward and reach for the ball. Let the club do all the reaching, which is what it will do if you straighten the left arm out toward the ball. This way you will get that perfect arm-like swing of the clubhead with its pull on the bottom of the arc, where it should be, and adding wrist throwing after that will be easy.

FIGHT TO BAR RABBIT PUNCH IN WRESTLING

By JACK CONWAY.

BOSTON wrestling fans have opened a drive to bar the rabbit punch from the mat game. They are presented a petition to Paul Bowser, acting chairman of the [illegible] commission when Strecka Lewis and Raffae Gemma, Italian heavyweight champion in a finish bout to [illegible] out of the Boston Arena a week from tomorrow night.

Lewis has resorted to the rabbit punch in order to win many of his latest matches. It has paved the way for the successful use of his famous headlock.

In his recent tussle with Ned Strecka Lewis really defeated the Italian Ironman by counting with blat punches, though the headlock got credit for the winning hold.

Jack Conway

The rabbit punch is delivered when opponents come to him, push his head forward and then crooks him at the nape of the brain with a vicious sock.

The rabbit punch has long been barred from the boxing game. It was first brought into prominence by Gunboat Smith one of the most famous of the white hopes. Smith knocked out Bombardier Wells, British heavyweight champion, with a rabbit punch. Smith like Lewis would pull his opponent into a crouch and then hit them as they stood on the base of the brain with a right hand sock.

As the blow is delivered on the back part of the head it is impossible to form a defense against it.

The rabbit punch was later used successfully by Jess Willard. The former cow puncher's use of the wallop caused it to be barred in United States where boxing is under control of commissions.

If Lewis is forbidden to use the rabbit punch he may not have such success with his headlock as he has been having. The Strangler usually clamps on his headlock after his rival is dazed from jarring rabbit blows.

HONEYBOY FINNEGAN is in for a tough training for his return bout with Mickey Travers, which will be staged in the Boston Arena Club on next Monday night. Finnegan has been boxing with Jimmy Williams of Fall River, and a flock of other sluggers sparring partners. He realizes he will have to be at his best if he is to keep Travers

Mr. Harrison is of the opinion that Travers has too much ring wisdom for Finnegan. He has also been particularly impressed when shooting his right hand punches at southpaws.

EVA MORRISON LEAVES HUB FOR NEW YORK

Miss Eva Morrison, the well known long distance swimmer, received a rain sendoff from New England swimming fans at Long wharf last night, when she left Boston for New York, the first lap of a journey which will end when she attempts to conquer the English Channel in August.

May 29 Miss Morrison will swim from Yonkers to the battery a distance of 18 miles. She is in the pink of condition and her recent trials indicate that she will not be bothered, as other stars have been by the cold waters of the Channel.

KID KAPLAN PURCHASES RELEASE FROM MONTEITH

New York, May 6 (A.P.)—Sprung some other sort of fever has attacked Scotty Monteith, who for three years has been half-manager of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, present featherweight boxing king.

Monteith announced today that he had sold his interest to the champion himself for $20,000, and that he planned to go to Atlantic city for a rest.

This action probably takes Kaplan's next defense of his title to his home State of Connecticut as Benny McMahon, his other manager, is a resident of that State.

HARVARD UNFAIR TOWARD SCHOOLBOYS IS CLAIM

CLUBS RAP CRIMSON'S ATTITUDE

Favor an Increase in Price of Football Tickets for Good of Sport

Charging that Harvard is [illegible] in its attitude toward schoolboy athletes, commending the raise in the price of football tickets and advocating summer baseball for students, the annual report of the American Harvard Clubs' athletic committee, just briefly with criticism.

The raise in the price of football tickets is declared necessary to the maintenance of college sports at the Cambridge institution. The text of the report

Too little attention has been paid at Harvard toward maintaining proper relations with schoolboy athletes. This is due, at least in part, to the fact that prospective schools from which Harvard has secured most of her athletes in the past have been sending fewer 'better men' to Harvard in recent years.

The influence of these relations moreover, extends still further for often the outstanding men in a school choose the same college as the majority of 'better men.'

HOSPITALITY LACKING

The lack of hospitality with which schoolboy teams have been received at Cambridge is an admitted fact.

Many of the members of these teams are still undecided as to their college choice, and their eventual decision is naturally influenced by the impressions they receive while on these trips.

Since they generally do not stay long enough to see the college and make acquaintances, their impressions are derived almost entirely from the reception that is given them.

The reception of visiting schoolboy teams is more difficult at Harvard because of the location of the college in a metropolitan district, several miles from a railroad terminal station. Much more, however, could be done than at present, by making definite plans for welcoming visiting teams and by providing the undergraduates who are alumni of the school which the visiting team represents.

FEW CONTACTS MADE.

At present everything is handled by assistant managers, who conduct the visitors from one place to another in a perfunctory manner; the schoolboys come in contact with few other members of the college.

Few contacts with athletes are made at schools by Harvard men, we have tended to lean over backward to avoid any appearance of proselyting. Occasionally, in compliance with a request from a school in the vicinity of Cambridge, we have sent a coach for the afternoon to give specialized instruction. This, and the lending coaches builds up friendly relations and should be encouraged.

Schools often have difficulty in securing officials for their athletic games. This committee recommends that consideration be given to the organization of a board of Harvard men who would be willing to serve as officials without remuneration at schoolboy games in the vicinity of Cambridge

APATHY THE RULE.

Harvard's attitude toward all schoolboys, not merely athletes, has generally been one of indifference. Harvard men seldom return to their preparatory schools to discuss with the boys their choice of college. This committee suggests that small groups of Harvard men, both graduate and undergraduates, be selected to visit their respective schools in the Spring and talk at arranged meetings with all boys who are interested in going to Harvard.

As to the proposal that the price of admission to annual football games between Harvard, Yale and Princeton be decreased from $3 to $2 for the undergraduates, and increased to $5 for all other applicants, the athletic committee of the three universities have recently agreed unanimously that the change be adopted, beginning with the games next Fall

This committee commends this policy on the ground that the result will be an increased income which is urgently needed to provide for the increasing participation in athletics by the whole undergraduate body.

As to the participation in Summer baseball, an understanding was reached whereby a boy wishing to play Summer ball should be required to present in advance a statement declaring that he will receive no remuneration for his services.

INDIANS VISIT HUB TODAY FOR OPENER

By NICK FLATLEY

LIFE for the Red Sox is just one pennant contender after another. Come now the Indians, as the films would put it. Tris Speaker's athletes are in the early part of the flag chase, though nobody expects them to stick there, and they will not give the Fenway flock any chance to ease off or recover from their [illegible] wounds

The Senators were very rough on the boys, taking three straight without any compunction. And the box, except in one game, were not impressive. Lee Fohl's young athletes, toted up in the third game, after kicking it away early, and the concluding hour or so of the mixup was about as fast as traffic in London these days

Nick Flatley

With the arrival of the Indians, the noble Sox may brighten up and get back into the game. According to all the dope, the team from Cleveland was doomed to second division fate, and perhaps the natives will feel that they're back in their own class.

POOR pitching was responsible for all the Washington disasters, aided and abetted by some sour pinch fielding. Ruffing was knocked out in the opener, Ehmke has dizzy spells in the second joust and Wingfield was crowned ferociously in the windup, after the rest of the crest had put him in the hole.

Jack Fohl will start all over again today with big Ruffing, and pray that the husky right-hander gets into form. Charlie can and will win ball games, but just how, when they're needed most, he's as effective as a bill collector, who's detected before the front door is opened. Someone, recent games would indicate, must have been using Charles how to be a smart pitcher.

His forgot his delightful habit of throwing the ball past the batter, and was ordered from the game. When he reached the bench he addressed a few scorching remarks to the arbiter and was ordered out of the park.

LEE FOHL has started pruning down his squad.

Young Dietrich, college infielder, who will be really good some day, has been shipped to Hartford, and Pitcher Neuhauser, a fine prospect, goes to Hank Gowdy out in Columbus. Both boys will get action, quickly and aplenty, and if they show some stuff right off the reel, they will be yanked back pronto.

A. A. U. QUERIES HOFF ON FRISCO WALKOUT

New York, May 6 (A.P.)—Charley Hoff, the vaulting Viking, has been asked by the Amateur Athletic Union to explain, under peril of punishment, why he has jumped the track meet in San Francisco, next Saturday

Hoff's statement, as reported in press dispatches, that he was notified of the meet only four days ago, is taken up in a telegram sent to him by the foreign relations committee of the A. A. U., which warns that unless he has sufficient reason for not appearing in the contests his permit in this country will be cancelled.

A letter received by the A. A. U. from the vaulter on March 31 said that he hoped to appear at Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco and took note of the fact that the date for the San Francisco competition had been changed.

Hoff Resents Attitude of Los Angeles

Pasadena, May 6 (A.P.)—Charlie Hoff, Norwegian pole vaulter, resents that his refusal to compete in San Francisco should bar him from a Los Angeles tournament. He hopes to vault at Los Angeles May 15, is indicated last night, after conflicting statements on his intentions had been circulated yesterday.

BENTON GOES TO HILL FOR BRAVES

Pittsburgh, May 6.—Manager Bancroft of the Braves will send LEFTY Benton, his star right hander, to the mound against the Pirates in the second game of the series this afternoon in an attempt to break the losing streak of the visitors. Big Emil Yde is the choice of the champions for sixth duty.

Bancroft will probably view the game from the grandstand. In the third inning of yesterday's game he became incensed when Umpire-in-Chief Barry McCormick failed to call what he (Banny) insisted was a ball on the part of Lee Meadows and was ordered from the game. When he reached the bench he addressed a few scorching remarks to the arbiter and was ordered out of the park.

The Braves hit Meadows hard in the first game but the great fielding of Wright at short and Rhyne at second prevented runs from scoring except in the eighth when they put two markers over the platter. The Rhyne-Wright combination accepted 11 chances and figured in four double plays.

Rhyne also accounted for the first Pirate run. He tripled in the first and scored on Carey's sacrifice fly.

RICKARD AND HARMON AT WAR OVER CHICAGO BOXING

BOTH HAVE PLENTY OF INFLUENCE

Broadway Vs. the Loop Promises to Be Battle Well Worth Watching

By DAVIS J. WALSH, International News Service Sports Editor.

New York, May 6.—According to information reaching the writer from reliable sources today, the inevitable Rickard-Harmon war for the control of boxing in Chicago has reached the stage of open hostilities at last.

Evidently Rickard counts that day lost whose low descending sun does not find him locked in a deathless vendetta with a body of men, completely surrounded by animosity. Last week it was the State Athletic Commission, or, rather, Chairman James A. Farley, who threatened to hang Rickard by the heels, unless he renounced the Dempsey contract.

Today, the good word was that Middle West influences were conniving to run the gentleman out of Chicago. It might be mentioned that when it comes to running Rickard is almost as fast as an empty pants' leg.

MEANS WAR.

One of the first items of information Rickard is said to have passed on to his directors last week upon his return from the West was that he had taken the annual Chicago six-day bicycle race away from Paddy Harmon. This, if true, means war to the death.

He might have taken Paddy's toothbrush or his right to wear sleeve garters, and it is possible that all would have remained serene but Harmon and the six-day race seem to have become a Chicago institution and, if you think this means nothing, you possibly are unaware of the fact that Harmon is a second a bigger man in Cook County than Rickard is on Broadway.

Rennsaal's would seem to be the natural consequence and possibly one of those was the announcement from Chicago that Rickard's proposed site for an arena had been killed by a rush of publicity to the head. However, the promoter's story to the directors was that he had abandoned the original site in favor of one within three minutes' ride of the loop.

He may lose one of these hand-to-hand combats some day, but the writer wouldn't care about betting any serious money on it. However, one setback might serve to shake the faith of those who have supported him lavishly with their money and influence, and Rickard can get along without neither.

PLENTY OF INFLUENCE.

Still, he seems to be more firmly seated in the saddle now than ever before. There are men far bigger than coaxing tied up in the Rickard enterprises and he can afford to seek a show-down with any and all rivals, at least in New York. He knows he cannot go wrong here, having been on the winning side of every promotional war since he first came into New York to take over Madison Square Garden while a lot of so-called smart ones were gazing fixedly at the distant sky line.

He even seems to have the Stoneham crowd licked to a whisper and the Giants' owner is said to be just as influential as a loaded revolver.

That's how big Rickard is and they say Harmon is bigger. Really a fine time should be had by all.

DORCHESTER AND REOS PLAY MONDAY

By STED CHANDLER

Joe Kendrick's Dorchester Town Team, member of the Twilight League, will fire the opening salute of the baseball season next Monday in an exhibition game with the Boston Reos, last year's champions of the Auto League.

A large crowd is expected to witness the first formal appearance of the Town Team, and the usual opening ceremonies will be in order with the Mayor and other city officials present.

Manager Kendrick is most optimistic about his team's outlook, and although he is not overconfident about the coming fray, as the Reos are known to be a strong outfit, he feels that Dorchester will take the exhibition contest and will be off on the right foot for the rapidly nearing Twilight series.

The Monday curtain raiser will give both the management and the fans an angle on the Town Team's material, and seeing the boys in action again should stimulate interest in Dorchester's representatives in the Twi circuit.

The roster already looks promising. Dick Harrell of Holy Cross, one of the most likely youngsters to put in an appearance at Worcester in some time, Cronin of B.-C., will Kelley of Tufts, have been signed and will report as soon as the college season is over.

These men should strengthen a team which looks strong right now. In Monday's game there will be a number of men to pick from, all of high calibre, so that the starters have not been chosen as yet. Pitcher Joe Harrell or Cassy will appear on first, Sullivan or Dinjian at second, while the outfield will be selected from Donovan, Murphy, Quinn and Cleary, the latter two both former North Cambridge players.

Haley of B. C. is a sure starter at third as is Gus Mailey, one-time Georgetown star, at shortstop. Either Gabrin or Ashworth will begin behind the bat with both of them undoubtedly seeing action before the game ends.

Kendrick will pick his pitcher from Jim Rhea, Mollernan, Kane and Spooner, all of whom have shown good stuff in workouts.

The Reos have a fine assortment to draw from and judging from the speed they maintained last year, they will not be easy to beat. The game, therefore, should open the season with a bang. This is no setup, and the town team will have to play ball from the start. It will also furnish the Dorchester fans with an excellent opportunity to show the players a sample of the support they are to receive throughout the approaching race.

BRADLEY TRYING TO PICK 3D DERBY HORSE

Lexington, Ky., May 6 (I.N.S.).—By a process of elimination Colonel E. R. Bradley is trying to decide which of his eight Kentucky Derby colts will stand the best chance of carrying away honors in the famous Churchill Downs classic.

Several days ago Bubbling Over and Boot to Boot finished first and second in a race here. The master of Idle Hour Farms plans to have three starters in the Kentucky classic. Bubbling Over and Bagdad Beggage have already been selected as his best bets. It was announced that Jockey E. Legere will ride one of the colts in the Derby.

Leonard Stopped Kilbane

"There's the greatest fighter the world ever saw," said Abe Attell as he pointed toward Benny Leonard, who had just finished Johnny Kilbane in the third round with a right-hander to the chin

We all have our favorite, but many a Kilbane admirer on the night of July 24, 1917, threw his hands in the air as he proclaimed the Bronx boy king

No champion in our time had ever been so far outclassed as Johnny Kilbane was that night by Benny Leonard, If you had gone to that fight not knowing who Kilbane was you would have sworn that he had never seen a boxing glove before, his showing was so poor

Outboxed, outpointed and outgeneraled, the Cleveland marvel was indeed a sorry sight

The fight was held at the American League Park in Philadelphia. The ring, an eighteen-foot affair, was pitched directly over the home plate

Joe Humphries introduced both men and announced that Leonard weighed 133 pounds at 8 o'clock, while Kilbane tipped the beam at 1??

The gong sounded and the two greatest little men in the world started to fight

Right off the bat Leonard sneaked over a left that sent Kilbane's head back and a mighty roar went up

Benny danced a step forward Kilbane, then a step back. It is his fighting style. He was on his toes all the time. He jabbed Johnny again much to the latter's sorrow and a tiny stream of blood trickled from the Cleveland boy's mouth. The Leonard admirers howled with glee.

Kilbane then tried his shifting feint in order to open Leonard's guard. He danced from side to side, feinting first with his right and then with the left, but he might just as well have tried to scare eagle on a silver dollar.

Leonard paid absolutely no attention to the feints, and when Kilbane finally did let go with left and right Leonard blocked both as though they had been feather pillows

That to a rush of the heart out of Kilbane

He danced away with a smile, and a moment later let fly a terrific right for Leonard's head. This was nicely ducked by the lightweight champion, who came up and smashed Kilbane on the mouth with a left that could be heard in the left field bleachers.

The Leonard crowd cheered themselves hoarse as the latter repeated a moment later with another The bell found Kilbane smiling, but running second.

Kilbane came out for the second round with a more serious expression on his face. As Leonard jabbed with a left, Kilbane caught his arm and drew him close. They wrestled a bit and Johnny let fly a terrific uppercut which landed Plush upon Leonard's chin

Instead of falling, Leonard merely stepped back and popped a left to Kilbane opponent's mouth drawing the blood again. They danced a bit, and Leonard repeated the lesson

Kilbane, a bit more confident now, swung a vicious left for Benny's head and missed. He swung a right and missed and then Leonard pinned a left to the stomach. He stepped back and busted a lip of a left to the mouth, and then blood ran down from Kilbane's mouth to his neck.

He tried to wipe it away with his glove, but made an awful smear of it. The bell gave Kilbane a chance to be washed off. Leonard walked right over to Kilbane as the bell clanged for the third and swung a left that missed its mark at least two feet.

Kilbane held until the referee broke them. Then he jumped into the air, a la Dundee, and let go two lefts. He missed, and as he was roaring himself again for another attack, Leonard left a crash him on the ear and he went sprawling to the ropes in Benny's corner

There was a wild yell from the crowd. It looked like a killing. Kilbane recovered himself and "came up smiling." It wasn't the smile of a winner.

Leonard coolly pushed him away and set himself for the killing. Kilbane led again. It was a weak lead. Leonard crashed a right over on the ear and Kilbane fell to the floor, trying to save himself by grabbing his opponent. He was up in a jiffy

The crowd howled for a knockout. They wanted someone down. Any body down would do. The fight crowd wanted a finish.

The referee broke the men and Kilbane danced away just as a drunken man would. Blood was streaming down his chin from his cut mouth.

He backed away and looked toward his corner with a glassy stare. He faced Leonard again. Benny feinted with the left for the stomach, and as Kilbane threw out his arm to clinch a right-hander caught him flush upon the chin and he fell down, his body right at Leonard's feet Kilbane got to his hands and knees immediately and started to put his hands up as the bell clanged

A second later a big towel went flying through the air.

It seemed as though everyone was yelling at the top of his voice Kilbane a seconds carried him to his chair and he kept muttering, "What's it about? What's the trouble? What is it?"

CLOTHING IS FIFTH OF BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

MORE ABOUT THE CLOTHES BUDGET

BUDGET TALK, NO. 44

By MARTHA LEE

SURELY the most interesting of the six budget divisions is the clothes budget. Next Monday I am having lunch with the most famous authority on budgets in New England and after that I should have some rare bits of wisdom to pass along to you, but I do know a little about this interesting subject, however, and what little I know I am sure of—so lend me your ears.

First, I know that having decided to make a clothing plan for yourself, the next thing is to determine how much money per year you can spend on your garments. The business woman's clothing expenditure should not exceed 10 per cent. of her income. The family cloth ng expenditure usually averages 17 per cent of the total family income, but should not exceed 20 per cent at the most.

Next, list the wearable clothing you now have on hand. If you wish to be real systematic you will rule a sheet, allowing one column for quantity, next column for articles, the next for seasons and the last for price. Now make a circle and divide it as you would a piece of pie, only your pieces will be uneven. Fifty-one per cent. of your pie—that is just a shade over half—will be allowed for coats, suits and dresses, blouses, sweaters and skirts; 24 per cent. is allowed for hats, shoes and gloves, 20 per cent. for underwear, including hosiery hosiery, by the way, usually takes 6 to 8 per cent. of the underwear budget; and 5 per cent. for accessories.

Now, of course, these percentages are not iron-clad. The division of 51 per cent. varies—some people prefer more dresses and therefore need fewer blouses, skirts and sweaters—others dress just the opposite. The average division, however, is 40 per cent. for coats, suits and dresses and 11 per cent. for blouses, sweaters and skirts.

I think you will enjoy keeping a separate budget sheet for clothing. You can rule it into 5 columns and divide the column into twelve months horizontally. The first column will be coats, suits and dresses; the second, blouses, sweaters and skirts; the third, hats, shoes and gloves; the fourth, underwarments and hosiery; the fifth, accessories. Decide how much per year you can give to these divisions and stick to them. Never go over your budget estimate unless you can find that one of the other classifications is under-spent.

Write or Print Very Plainly

BUDGET MAKES PARTNERS OF MAN AND WIFE

Of course it is very difficult to plan a year's wardrobe in advance, and expect to live up to it, unless you have been living on a budget and know how to plan a year ahead. The best you can do the first year is guess-work, but keeping your figures accurately will give you a working plan for next year.

In buying your clothes according to budget try to consider always not only the needs of the coming season, but those over a period of 3 years. Buy with an intelligent knowledge of fabric, line, color, and your own personality and care for your clothes systematically and intelligently. If you would like a special form for a clothing budget, just drop me a line and I will be glad to send it to you. There is no question but that a budget helps you to spend more efficiently and wisely and gives you a far better balanced wardrobe than bit or miss purchasing. A clothing budget also often solves the financial problem for these women who never seem to have anything in clothes.

If a budget is made based on the total family income, it shows plainly how much should be allotted for dressing the family and gives her her share without a struggle. No more trying to tease dresses out of father—budget will give them to you without an argument.

Mrs. P. D. has four in the family and $50 a week income. Rent is $18 rent, $4.25 a week for insurance, $8 for furniture a week, $4.65 for milk $2.85 for lights, $7 for husband's spending money. Also has a car. Must move and is having trouble in finding a rent under $45 or $50. Has never paid more than $30 is much wanted and ask for advice.

You surely have been fortunate to get an attractive rent in a desirable location for $30 all these years. I am quite sure you can pay $45 without it seeming a strain. This is how the new budget will line up weekly.

Shelter, $11, including husband's business carfares; food, $14, including husband's lunches downtown; clothing, $7; operating, insurance, heat and light, $5.50; personal, which as you know, includes all other expenses, $6, and husband, $8.50. Doesn't this seem a reasonable bet to you? Write me again if everything is not clear.

Mrs. G. H. is anxious to try budgeting. Husband has salary of $28 a week and holidays out, two in family. Daughter takes dancing lessons once a week; has a fiveyear and $7 a month garage rent. Income $6 cents a week, washing 80 cents, 50 cents for children's school bank, 55 cents for reading matter, $1.64 a month for husband's club dues, church $1.50 a month. I am delighted to help you.

I think it is safest to budget $38 a week for you on account of those holidays. This will give you shelter, $4 a week including husband's business carfare; food, $10, including husband's luncheon; clothing, $7; operating, $5, personal, $4.50, which must include the dancing lessons, the garage rent, all expenses of running the automobile, doctors and dentist's bills, reading matter and church and club dues; the savings budget gets $3.50 a week which includes all insurance as well as the children's school banking. The electric, gas, telephone and washing come out of operating.

Mrs. E. U. has $96 a month to live on with $ in the family, one of which is a two-old baby. Pays $7.50 a week for rent, $3 a month insurance, $8 a month for garage—has an automobile. Asks how much she should save. The $32.50 budget should give you $4.40 for shelter, including husband's business carfare; $6.50 for food, including husband's lunches; $2.50 for clothing, $2.25 for operating, $2.20 for savings, including insurance and $8.90 for personal, out of which you will have to pay your garage rent and all the expenses of the car. You see you are exceeding your rent allowance already and I hate to be such a killjoy as to suggest that your car is eating up more than you can afford, but no doubt you will be willing to make sacrifices elsewhere to take care of this.

Mrs. T. F. H. has 9 in family but only herself to clothe; $65 a week; rent, $40 a month; church and club dues, $1.90 a week; telephone, $3.45; light, about $1 a week; gas, 75 cents; other expenses about $6 a month.

With so many in the family, food, of course, is going to be your largest expense. However, nine can be fed much more cheaply per head than four.

Twelve dollars for shelter, including husband's carfare; $23.10 for food, including husband's lunches downtown; $6.75 for clothing; $5.75 for operating; $6.90 for savings, including insurance, and $9.75 for personal, out of which must come church and club dues, doctors' and dentists' bills and all other expenses. The telephone, light and gas come out of operating.

Dear Mrs E. D: I am writing you a special letter, but because your problem is one of general interest, am sharing it with our readers. Your income of $6,100 a year figures up to $508.33 per month; rent, $65.00; the part time of one maid $35.00; laundry, $5.00; electricity $7.00; coal, $75.00; expenses of your car, $15; food, including milk, $115.00; clothing, $60.00, are moderate expenses for your income. $25.00 a year for magazines and papers, $32.00 for club dues and $60.00 for church, doctors and dentists are a good average. Since you have no back debts, you have surely proven that you are handling the family finances intelligently. The standard allotments for your income will be: $101.66 for shelter, including business carfare; $127.08 for food, including husband's lunches; $78.24 for clothing; $50.83 for savings, including insurance, $78.24 for operating, including heating, telephone and maid's salary; and $76.24 for personal, including all payments on car and expenses of running it as well as all other bills, church, charity, doctors, dentists, entertainment, magazines, club dues, etc.

GO A-TARTING—They say seeing is believing, and when you add the test of taste there just isn't room left for any argument.

Tuesday, when I was making my rounds with every eye opened for news items for you all you good friends, I stopped in to see an enticing new model shown in one of the Electric Refrigerator showrooms.

A most obliging salesman explained all the points of advantage of this enticing bit of white porcelain and machinery and then said: "Wouldn't you like to try some of the foods that we have kept in the chest since April 1st?" Opening one door of the refrigerator, she showed me oranges, apples, pears, bananas and grapefruit that apparently were in a perfect state of preservation, although they had been frequently taken out into the light of day and squeezed and poked by the inquisitive forefinger of interested visitors. They certainly seemed crisp and fresh and I wouldn't have minded sampling a slice of any one of them, but instead of suggesting this the gentleman, producing a bottle of milk bearing the label April 20, which he said had not been opened since it was put into the Electrical Refrigerator on that date, said: "I am not just sure how this milk is. We opened a jar yesterday that had been in since the 15th and it was perfectly O. K., but we won't try that anyway."

Perhaps he noticed my hesitancy. At all events he swallowed the first dose himself. I watched carefully to see any signs of distress. Instead, he seemed to acquire the satisfied expression of the cat after it has devoured the canary.

Then he poured out another glass for me. I summoned every ounce of courage that I possess, shut my eyes and opened my mouth and swallowed fast. That milk tasted just as fresh as the bottle I had taken from in my door that morning, which was supposed to have made a quick trip from cow to consumer.

I don't think they have yet discovered how long a roasted chicken would have to stay in an Electrical Refrigerator before it would be beyond use. The longer they stay in, the more tender and delicious they seem, and so with steak, chops, etc. The test of this dryness was brought home very clearly to me by a box of matches, our ordinary kitchen matches. These matches had been in the refrigerator for some two months.

I scratched one myself on the inside was dry as the refrigerator air, crisp and cold and dry enough to permit this test. It showed me so clearly just why there isn't a chance in the world for a speck of mold to accumulate in an Electrical Refrigerator.

The installation of a chest such as this certainly offers many advantages of great importance to housewives. First, a temperature always below 50 degrees, a cold, dry air which preserves food for many days; a saving in food alone that makes the purchase of such a chest an economy; a maintenance cost for current that almost invariably averages less than $1 a week; no iceman to wait for; no ice card to remember; no iceless days, no chipped ice on your floors; no worry about trips away from home; many of the pure ice-cubes always ready for use, and an ice-chest that gives perfect refrigeration if you are considering a new chest, in whatever make of chest you may select. If you would like further particulars or have any questions to ask, don't hesitate to write me and complete information with illustrated booklets will go promptly to you.

FRIEDRICH WILHELM.

The Queen of Prussia to Queen Victoria.

COBLENTZ. 15th July, 1870.

France will have war and insists on the King complying with her last demand and giving a binding declaration for the future, which as Sovereign it was impossible for him to do.

England Unprepared

May Almighty God be pleased to prevent a war which would be fraught with horror for the whole of Germany, for Central Europe, and for civilization generally.

AUGUSTA.

Queen Victoria to Mr. Gladstone (Prime Minister).

OSBORNE, 18th July, 1870.—In the present state of public affairs, when, as proved by the example on the Continent, Great Britain may be exposed to a sudden and unexpected attack at any moment, the Queen is anxious to be assured that the defences of the United Kingdom are on a satisfactory footing.

Lord Halifax has shown the Queen a memorandum that there are 88,000 regular troops in the United Kingdom and that of these 20,000 could take the field at the end of three weeks if great exertions were made. The Queen cannot conceal her disappointment and uneasiness at this statement, which implies that in case of emergency England must be far behindhand with other continental powers, two of whom have in a few days placed large forces in the field and are to all appearance ready for action.

The Queen considers it her duty to impress most strongly upon her Ministers the paramount importance of being fully prepared for any possible danger, which is the surest way of averting war.

Queen's Cruel Position

Queen Victoria to Earl Granville (Foreign Secretary).

OSBORNE, 20th July, 1870.—The Queen is overwhelmed with the terrible anxiety and sorrow which this horrible war will bring with it. The Queen hardly knows how she will bear it! Her children's home threatened, their husbands' lives in danger, and the country she loves best next to her own—as it is her second home, being her beloved husband's, and one to which she and all her family are bound by the closest ties—in peril of the gravest kind, insulted and attacked and she unable to help them or to come to their assistance. Can there be a more cruel position than the unhappy Queen's? She knows what her duty is and will do what must be done but she will suffer dreadfully.

Queen Victoria to the Crown Princess of Prussia.

OSBORNE, 20th July, 1870.—MY POOR DEAR BELOVED CHILD—Words are far too weak to say all I feel for you or what I think of my neighbors! We must be neutral as long as we can but no one here conceals their opinion as to the extreme iniquity of the war and the unjustifiable conduct of the French! Still more publicly we cannot say; but the feeling of the people and the country here is all with you, which it was not before. And need I say what I feel!

VICTORIA R.

Gloomy Christening

The Crown Princess of Prussia to Queen Victoria.

NEUES PALAIS, 25th July, 1870.

MY BELOVED MAMA.— The Christening went off well, but was sad and serious; anxious faces and tearful eyes, and a gloom and foreboding of all the misery in store spread a cloud over the ceremony which would have been one of gladness and thanksgiving.

My sweet little Sophie (afterwards Queen of Greece) looked pale.

The feeling is very general here that England would have it in her power to prevent this awful war, had she in concert with Russia, Austria and Italy declared she would take arms against the aggressor, and rest her neutrality afforded France advantages and us disadvantages.

France can buy English horses, as her ships can reach England, whereas ours cannot on account of the French fleet.

25th July.—I met up till late last night waiting for Fritz's return, and went to sleep before he came. This morning before I woke he got up, and when I asked where he was I was told he had gone back to Berlin, and I found a slip of paper from him saying he was gone to the Army and had wished to spare me a leave taking. The thought was so kind, and yet how I feel as if my heart would break; he is gone without a kiss or a word of farewell, and I do not know whether I shall ever see him again!

King Deeply Grieved

The King of Prussia to Queen Victoria.

Berlin, 26th July, 1870.

DEAR SISTER—The present crisis is indeed of such a nature as to excite deep sympathy, when one sees how I myself, my country, and all Germany, provoked by France's arrogance, are now suddenly plunged into a momentous war.

In consequence of the universal indignation against the disturber of peace, I was led to hope, I may candidly confess, that, after your declaration was rejected by France, some common action of the European Powers might result in favor of our just cause, and either prevent war, or at any rate hasten its favorable conclusion.

Do you think, dear sister, that I am not aware of the difficulties of your high position; I know full well that your own upright, correct feelings can only influence the views of your own government, so far as they coincide with the wishes, views and interests of the nation, and that English tendencies at the present moment are not favorable to any foreign combinations.

And now, dear sister, I bid you heartily farewell, recommending myself and my holy cause to your prayers.

WILHELM R.

P. S.—We have today received intelligence that notwithstanding England's declaration of neutrality, horses, coals, and even ammunition in the shape of millions of cartridges, are being shipped to France from England; whilst we expected a decree forbidding the exportation of all war material. This grieves me deeply.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Does the groom supply the entire outfit for his attendants?

2. Who supplies the flowers for the bride's attendants?

3. Please state the correct attire for the groom and his attendants for a church wedding at 7 o'clock in the evening.

A JUNE GROOM.

NO. Every attendant is supposed to supply his own outfit.

2. Usually the father of the bride. Sometimes the groom supplies them.

3. Evening clothes.

I have prepared pamphlets on the correct clothes for the groom and his attendants at a day wedding and at an evening wedding. I also have pamphlets on "The Obligations of the Groom," and a list of "Suggestions for the Groom's Gift to His Attendants." If you or any other groom will send me an addressed envelope, I shall be very happy to send you any of these.

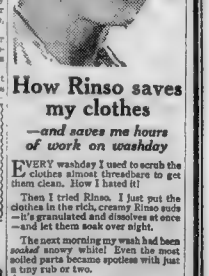
How Rinso saves my clothes

—and saves me hours of work on washday



EVERY washday I used to scrub the clothes almost threadbare to get them clean. How I hated it!

Then I tried Rinso. I just put the clothes in the rich, creamy Rinso suds —it's granulated soap—and at once —and let them soak over night.

The next morning my wash had been soaked nowsy white! Even the most soiled parts became spotless with just a tiny rub or two.

No more washboards for me—no more hours of exhausting work—I always use Rinso now. And my hands are grateful, too. With Rinso they never get a bit red.

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "GILDED KISSES"

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

CHAPTER LXI.

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc.

SYLVIA was utterly at sea. If Ranny hadn't spent the night at his father's home, where on earth had he spent it? Where had he been all night? Where was he now?

She tried to think of places where he might have gone, but she couldn't think clearly at all.

But she gave no sign of the panic that had taken hold of her.

"I've just got to get hold of Ranny," she said quietly, and moved toward the door.

As she nodded good-bye at him, he said: "Wait a minute."

She saw his hand in the top drawer of his desk. She knew that he was going to give her some money—probably the money that Ranny had spoken of in his cruel little note—and she shook her head.

"Oh, no!" she said. She didn't want any of their money. She had taken care of herself before, and she could take care of herself again. The thought of touching the Phelps' money was dreadful to her.

Mother Phelps she telephoned later, from the booth in the outer office.

As she waited Sylvia looked out at the girls in the office. Most of them were pretty and graceful as they bent over their desks like drooping flowers. One—a fluffy blond young thing—was really beautiful.

Ranny's Loves

"If Ranny had to fall in love, why couldn't it have been with one of those pretty girls instead of Babe?" she found herself thinking.

But she knew the answer to the question, almost before the question had taken form in her brain. He had fallen in love with Babe because she gave him the flattery that no one else ever gave him.

There had been a time when Sylvia had words of praise for him, too, and she had meant every one of them, with all her heart. But she knew him now. She knew that he could never be anything but a half-successful salesman. He didn't know the meaning of real work.

His mother adored him, but even she had to admit that her only son was unstable. Her affection for Sylvia was founded on her sympathy for the girl.

His father knew that he had no business ability, and had finally made Thomas Boyle his right hand man in the firm.

Lolly, who read him like a book, called him "Lazy Susan." His inferiority complex had become a by-word in the Phelps family. No one took Ranny seriously any more.

It remained for Babe Delano to come along and tell him that he was a misunderstood genius. Her flattery soothed his wounded vanity. He felt that she alone, of all the world, appreciated him.

Her Clothes Riddled

"As long as Babe flatters him she'll hold him," Sylvia said to herself. And perhaps she will hold him. Perhaps she'll keep him where I've failed to—

Her mother-in-law's voice broke in upon her thoughts.

"I can't find Ranny," Sylvia told her. "He left our house yesterday afternoon and took his clothes with him. He isn't coming back to me, he says, so I'm going to tell him I'll give him a divorce. But I can't get hold of him to tell him so, and I thought perhaps he'd called you up."

"No, Mother Phelps answered promptly. "I haven't heard from him. Hasn't he been at the office this morning?"

Then, without waiting for Sylvia to answer, she went on briskly: "I'll tell you what to do. You hop into a cab and come here to my house and we'll talk this over. And on your way here stop at the 7—— Ranny may have gone there!"

"Oh, that's where he is, of course," Sylvia thought, as she stood in the outer office, waiting for her cab.

She was unaware of the fact that the girls around her were looking her over and wondering why young Mr. Phelps' wife didn't have more money to spend on her clothes.

"Why, she's been wearing that same suit for three or four seasons," Fathey Phelps' secretary said to Masha Young, the switchboard operator. "The last time she was down here she had it on, and that was before her first baby died."

Masha Young shrugged her shoulders. "She should worry about clothes when she has a face like that," she retorted. "If I could have her eyes I'd wear calico for the rest of my sweet young life."

She, herself, put vaseline on her lashes every night, in the hope of making them just half as long and thick as Sylvia's. And she was coming to the unhappy conclusion that the only way to become beautiful is to be born beautiful.

Her eyes followed Sylvia wistfully as she went down the front steps and climbed into her cab.

"The 7——" Sylvia said to the taxi driver.

She would go there and tell Ranny that she would give him the divorce he wanted. She knew he must make him understand that the thing would have to be done decently and quietly. He must promise not to see Babe until he was free. He must do it, on his own account. A scandal did a man's business no good.

Sylvia's whole thought was for him, for the fatuous cut his way through the traffic of Washington street to the hotel door.

There was a hatless girl in the taxi that Ranny had just taken a cab to, St. Botolph street.

St. Botolph street, of course. That was where Babe lived. Why hadn't she thought of that, in the first place? She flung herself into another taxicab and rushed to the building where Babe had her apartment and suite. Babe' card was not in suite rack.

Sylvia rang the janitor's bell.

A frowsy woman stuck her head in the doorway.

Miss Delano? What is the number of her suite?" Sylvia asked her.

Ranny Takes Babs

"She ain't got no suite number here no more," she answered. "She didn't give me no two weeks' notice, like she was supposed to, either. Just walked out."

"Did she go—alone?" Sylvia's soft voice lingered on the words.

"No. Indeed!" she said, with a worldly-wise air. "A man come for her in a taxicab and she drove off with him."

In Louisburg square she found Ranny's mother dressed for the street.

"Well, you've been a long time getting here," she greeted Sylvia, coldly, as she came running up the steps. "I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to see this Delano woman and talk to her. This thing has gone far enough. It's time I put a stop to it."

"No. There's no use in your going, Mother Phelps," Sylvia said, with a wan little smile. "Babe Delano isn't there any more. She's left her flat. I was just there, and——I think that Ranny's gone with her."

She did not cry, but dry sobs he gan to shake her. Mother Phelps took her firmly by the shoulder and marched her into the house and upstairs to her own cheerful bedroom.

"Now! Now! Now!" she scolded her. "This is no time to go to pieces. What makes you think that Ranny and she have gone away together? Why, he wouldn't do such a thing. Ranny may be foolish, but he's not common."

Sylvia told her story.

"Then you don't really know that they went away, do you? You just think that they did," Mother Phelps summed it all up when she had finished. "But I don't. I think that this Delano woman is just moving in new flat somewhere in town, and Ranny was probably helping her with her luggage."

She picked up the extension telephone that stood on the table beside her bed and called the 7——

"You see, she said triumphantly to Sylvia, when she was through talking. "Ranny hasn't checked out of the hotel. His luggage is still there. My dear, you've been losing your imagination run away with you."

The Changeable Young Man

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

HE DOES a complete right-about-face. Once he had a set of adjectives in his young —very young mind—that he derisively sang about a certain young—very young—maiden. And they ran something like this:

—"fresh; little fatty; hey kid; taggers got to tag me everywhere I go; pest; crybaby; little Swede towhead; just a girl!"

He pulled her stretchy curls. He tweaked her nose until the tears swam in her eyes and the little nose stung. He chased her. Threw away her mittens. "Yahed" and "pooked" her. Scorned her soft-eyed, primrose-pink worship. Stalked away from her and sweet approach. Condescended once to tie her little shoe and called her a "old baby" when he did it, while his ears flamed with the disgrace and guilt of an act of gallantry!

In short, he went her berk when she tried to go with him, and considered her presence as a bucket of cold water on a warm spooning grandmother at a cherry-swiping—a stomache-ache at a party—"ashes on the stide"—and two end of monkey-wrenches in the wheels of boy projects!

And oh what a right-about-face!

Now that same boy is trying to persuade the same young maiden—now the pretticst flapper in the world—to spend all her hours with HIM! Now it is Adam who is being continually chased home again, and told to go on—he is a pest! Adam who cannot imagine any masculine project so complete, so blessed, so dizzily happy as when the "old baby," with her stretchy curls now cut short, consents to go along.

Adam who digs HER footsteps, who tries to cut everything and everybody else out of her focus. And his song to her has changed. His adjectives—you'd never know them. He has gone to the rainbow and all the mad poets for them. And the modern masters of poetical slang!

——"chic; slim as a willow switch; soft; oh you; cold heart and warm eyes; a star; divine; a sweet kid; goldie; what a girl!"

Now it is "what a girl!"—NELL BRINKLEY.

MAKING OF A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"I TRUSTED you to be consistent," Jim went on, hammering his point home. "I felt sure that you wouldn't judge me. I counted on your loyalty when everything in the world pointed at me and cried: 'Thou art the man!' Well, dear——Follow it up for yourself."

"You knew I'd trust you. And I did," I said slowly.

"Now parallel it," Jim ordered.

"If I know you trust me—you will," I said slowly.

Jim threw back his head and laughed with loud masculine guffaws before he got hold of himself.

"There's no question of trusting you." He added stiffly as if in self-defense. "It was a case of approach. I know that. There is no question of her sanity, or purity. Such matters are not involved. We are not discussing my wife's character."

"What are we discussing, then?" I demanded.

"What do you mean?" Jim gasped.

"Well come to that in a moment," I said, deciding that it was high time for me to try to get the reins of this strange conversation into my own hands. "What I want to know now is what you meant when you said there was a parallel to my trust in you——"

"I guess I meant a converse—not a parallel." Jim confessed ruefully. "You trust me—and I turn out to be all right. If you didn't—I might go wrong."

"But I always have trusted you," I said.

"Not in the Ruth Gregory matter," Jim said. "And I don't trust myself to be a mind reader and see what is going to hurt you. . . . The Ruth Gregory business was a molehill to me—and to you it was the biggest mountain of our married life. In the Neal case I was judging the only way I possibly could logically, and I failed you hideously in your greatest crisis. In the one when I shouldered the responsibility of your protection in order to keep you from breaking her heart over Pat's affair you trusted me. You never picked me or me judged me. You never blamed me. And I think I acted like a fool and a knave to let you suffer as Jessie could go free."

Jim stopped abruptly. He looked at me as if he expected something. I suppose that in this moment I should have gone to him, flung my arms around him and have told him what it meant to me to have him speak in this way. And I couldn't! Something inside me had frozen at the moment when Jim suggested that there was a question of my choosing between him and Ralph. Jim waited for a few moments and then he resumed with a brusk

"You asked me a moment ago whether I thought that even now I could hurt and shame and humiliate you as—and I couldn't answer her

The Temptress

HE raised his hands to his blouse lapels to detach her hands from them. But at the contact of the fingers with the soft, smooth skin of her hands, he stopped dismayed; and then very gently he caressed them. And when he looked into Elena's eyes, that were imploring a reply to her question, he merely nodded . . . "Yes!"

From that day on Watson became the marquesa's only escort on her rides. Pirovani offered his escort.

But the "senora marquesa" would have none of his company.

"You have business to attend to, Senor Pirovani. My husband says that you've been away a good deal lately, and I don't like to hear that! The Senor Watson has more free time now and he is going with me.

At other times Canteras would come riding down the street. Would not she let him accompany her? But Elena was provoking, making signs that meant "no" with her riding whip.

"But I've told you several times that I don't want any escort but Mr. Watson," she told him quite frankly one morning. "Do go along, my dear captain, and finish up that grand surprise that you are getting ready for me."

Canteras, too, was disposed to accept Elena's choice of the American youth as an escort without too much bitterness. So long as it wasn't Pirovani.

"I got Pirovani's men away from him by offering them double pay," said Moreno. "And I got hold of all the carts he had contracted to get, and all those in Puerta Sarmiento. This will delay the work at the dam a little. But both you and Pirovani will have to find some way of making up for lost time."

Near the Presa, in a level spot barren of all vegetation close to the river, peons were planting trees in holes prepared for them, heaping up the earth around them to keep the trees upright.

"The trees are only a few yards high, but they will be very effective in the future. Whole trees are no others to compare them with. You can be sure of one thing, captain! The Presa Watson settlement will be struck dumb with amazement when they see what you have done. Pirovani could certainly never have planned all that."

Canteras fully approved of the last words.

"You are going to spend every cent of your several thousand pesos," Moreno went on. "It may even happen you'll run short of money before you get through. But you'll have your pard of course there won't be any cost in keeping it up, because a few days after the fiesta the trees will be withered and dead."

And the government employe laughed at the uselessness of this enormous expenditure.

Meanwhile Elena and Watson were riding slowly along the river bank. The marquesa had taken possession of one of his hands, and she was talking affectionately to him, with an air of maternal interest and tenderness.

"From what you tell me, Ricardo, it is evident that Robledo is managing the whole business, and that you are after all nothing but an employee of his . . . . I have no right to intrude on your affairs, but in spite of myself, everything that concerns you interests me so much. I don't say that he is not quite fair in his division of the earnings. . . . but Robledo is the sort of man who is always certain to be. business But, just the same, I think he takes advantage of the fact that you are younger. And you have to enable pate yourself from his control or you will never go so far as your ability makes me expect you to go."

Wrinkles Removed "While You Wait"

It has been discovered that the mere application of a spoonful of Powdered Tarkroot mixed with a spoonful of lemon juice, actually removes wrinkles and creases in fifteen minutes or less! There's no rubbing, no work, and the expense is trifling—less than three cents! It is only necessary to spread the mixture over the face, sit down before the mirror, and watch those unwelcome marks of age, illness or worry disappear like magic. The effect is incomparably better than that produced by massaging.

The mixture of course is perfectly harmless. When on the face a pleasant soothing sensation is experienced. It is easily washed off. Aside from its remarkable effect on wrinkles, there's nothing better for baggy cheeks or chin. No woman who purchases a package of Powdered Tarkroot from her druggist will regret having done so.

Bran—eat it and love it this way—get Puffed Wheat

HERE'S a cereal with approximately 20% bran, yet you would never know it.

It's called Puffed Wheat—a unique cereal food. There is no other like it. It tastes like toasted nut meats, crunches in the mouth like fresh toast; you'll find it as enticing as a confection.

It's whole wheat steam exploded to 8 times its natural size, then deliciously oven toasted. Different in flavor and form from any other cereal, it supplies the great adventure of a change at breakfast to keep the appetite keen.

You eat it because you love it, not merely because it is "good" for you. Contains vital wheat elements essential to health, digests quickly because every food cell is steam broken.

Obtain Puffed Wheat at any grocery. Serve at breakfast tomorrow, or as a bedtime snack tonight. You will be delighted.

Quaker Puffed Wheat

"Tintex tints the silk without coloring the lace!"

HAVE you tried Tintex on the Blue Bird on your lace-trimmed "undies"? You will be delighted to find that it tints the silk, but the lace remains of original white or ecru. So easy, too, and all the popular pastel tints from which to choose. Try it that way once. You will be delighted at the new beauty and economy—it brings to your finery.

Blue Bird — for lace-trimmed silks (tints the silk—but leaves lace white)
Gray Bird—for tinting and dyeing all mercerized cloth, cotton, mixed goods.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

A NEW YORK man has cut down his living expenses by inviting professional men to his social affairs. He gave a musicale the other night and had the dentist pull his wife's teeth between numbers.

AND during intermission, he asked the doctor to go upstairs and take out his mother-in-law's tonsils.

THE doctor was so obliging that he also had him remove her appendix while he was in a good humor.

INSTEAD of listening to the musical program, the physician had to spend his evening among carbuncles and adenoids.

THE hostess even invited the Smith Brothers so that they could pass out cough drops while she was singing.

BUT she was very thoughtful of the Smith boys. She had a barber in the parlor in case one of the brothers wanted a shave.

SHE had to pay for the sandwiches, however. The delicatessen man refused to be a guest.

HE came to her party C. O. D.

ONE woman was so chea pthat she used to ask the chiropodist over for a game of bridge every time she wanted a corn removed.

HED fix her bunions while he was the dummy.

WHEN it came to her feet, she used her head.

THE chiropodist did a six dollar job for fifteen cents worth of coffee and cake.

AND while the pedal expert was eating, the husband would take a quarters worth of corn plasters out of his grip.

THEY were so stingy that a burglar broke into their house one night and lost seven dollars.

DAILY SHORT STORY

HONOR AMONG THIEVES

By Louise Peple Armstrong

BLONDIE RAGLAND crouched behind the crumbling wall which separated the ten story tenement from the tanning factory, and listened intently to the footfalls of the police as they tripped cautiously up the alley on the opposite side. There were four, Blondie concluded, and they were taking no chances on a blind rush. Stealthily they crept forward, scarcely making enough sound to keep their intended captor advised of the progress they made over the rough cobble stones. Suddenly one of them tripped and, fell, uttering a smothered oath, quickly silenced.

"That's Fraw belly," thought Blondie. "The fat fool!"

Not another sound was heard, and Blondie flattened in the shadows of the wall, began to suffer intensely from his cramped position and from other causes. First his left foot went to sleep, tingling and numb, slowly developing into the most excruciating agony, then the sharp pain in his side gripped him again, made the sweat stand cold upon his brow as he gritted his teeth to bear it.

Suddenly there arose a wailing from one of the windows close beside him, a door a few paces beyond opened, then slammed again. There was silence. Then a low, frightened sound of sobbing upon the little stoop beyond him in the darkness. It was a child—turned out of doors into the night!

That the police had not been moved to investigate convinced Blondie they had indeed gone. He crept stealthily forward, and was very close to the child before she noised his presence. He saw that it was a girl—a child about ten years old.

"Say, sister, whispered Blondie cautiously, "what have they done to you? Who turned you out?"

"Twas Minnie—my pawe's wife," the child told him in a hushed voice, trembling with fear. "Paw didn't come home, an' I cried. Minnie treated me bad—she ain't my own maw."

"Who are you, kid?" asked Blondie kindly.

"Netta Cellini—I'm Tony Cellini's girl," she replied. She had stopped her sobbing now, raised her dark head timidly and looked up at Blondie in the faint light of the street lamp.

Blondie started slightly at her words. He bent his light curly head, seemed to be pondering deeply.

"I can't leave you here," he said, still speaking in a whisper. "Can't do it! You say your stepmother treats you rough?"

The child nodded.

"Then you can't stay"

"I'll be all right when Paw comes." The little voice was confident. "Paw won't let her abuse me. You must go now. Paw'll be home soon."

Blondie was silent again. Then he raised his yellow head, put his hand out timidly in the darkness and touched the little hand of the child.

"I think you'd better be comin with me, sister."

"I'll be waitin' for my Paw." The little voice was firm.

"Your Paw, he won't be comin home tonight, kid."

"Hush" commanded Blondie. Then suddenly he reached out and grabbed her, holding her tightly in his strong young arms, patting his long, slim fingers over her mouth to stop her cries. Still holding her thus, he ran down the street, turned into a dark alley and disappeared.

The big door of the Sisters of Charity Home for Orphans opened slowly, and a quiet-faced woman looked out. On the steps stood Blondie, still holding the struggling little form of the child.

"Let us in," he commanded the woman. "You've got to take this kid. She needs someone to look after her—to be protected, see?"

Silently the woman admitted them. Blondie set the round-eyed little one upon the chair the woman indicated, and the child now made no outcry, simply sat there and looked up at him with a white, scared little face.

Blondie bent over her, patted her kindly on the arm. "Your paw has gone away for a spell," he said. "You must stay here where you'll be looked after."

The child kept her sobs again her hands, clung to his words, she raised her eyes to him pleading-ly, eyes like purple pansies in the rain.

"You're a pretty kid—be a good kid when you grow up!" Blondie said in a husky voice. "Don't let nobody persuade you to do anything, see?"

"Don't leave me—take me with you," sobbed the child.

Blondie smiled, a twisted smile. "I ain't fit to raise no kid," he said. "But I'll be lookin' after you, girlie! I'll always be havin' an eye on you, whether you know it or not. Because you're—something in a sense responsible for, see? I'll see you grow up to be a lady, kid."

He turned then to the astonished sister, whispered a word to her, and together they stepped into the little side-room, out of hearing of the child.

"Take my word for it," said Blondie Ragland briefly; "tomorrow her—father's dead. She don't know—they haven't dragged him out of the river yet. It'll be in the papers in the morning."

Then without another word Blondie turned and treading silently disappeared through the big door and out into the night.

The Sister of Mercy turned to the little child, who, feeling the comforting arms of a good woman about her, sobbed out her fright and grief anew.

"Poor little thing" said the Sister, with a catch in her voice. "Poor little thing! You're come to a good home, dear—and I hope we can keep you!"

Meanwhile Blondie took a circuitous route, pausing in many places to listen for the ominous footfall of the police, but in every instance he was reassured. Finally he reached the door of a certain junkshop in the lower quarters of the city. There he entered and was greeted warmly by the 6 whites. He sprawled upon a chair, smiled up at them cynically with a twist of his lips and then said unconsciously to the floor. They ripped away his clothing and found a big gash in his side. It was a smooth cut and the blood still flowed.

One of the men nodded significantly, and another came with the necessary bandages and began very efficiently to bind up the place.

"Tony Cellini's work," said the man who had nodded. "Blondie's had a close call. Reckon they must have had words about divvying up the stuff they took from the 7th street jewelry store last night! Tony's outdid on the draw, but Blondie has been quicker this time! Cops just pulled out what's left of Tony, out of the river with a big hole in his forehead!"

Blondie opened his eyes, steely blue with his struggle against unconsciousness.

"Lots of life left in the 'ole bird still," said another of the men about him.

"Sure," condmented another. "He'll be up and round in a couple o' days. But he'd better quit these parts when he is"

"You men git out o' here," commanded one who seemed to be in authority. "Blondie goes upstairs with me. Put out them lights. Want the whole blame police force on top o' us?"

"You're right, Bill, agreed another in a body.

Two lifted Blondie gently, and bore him out of the room, and the rest silently departed.

"Anybody seen Tony Cellini; he's been hangin, about the wharf with a bunch o' sailors," commanded Bill as they went.

"Sure," they all said in a low chorus, closing the door behind them.

Blondie winced as they started up the stairs with him, gritted his fine white teeth firmly. His lips moved, and he laughed out suddenly in the hysteria of delirium.

"A good little kid," he cried. 'Blondie's goin' to see that she grows up to be a lady. I'm responsible- I'll look after her!"

"What's he ravin' about now?" asked one of his carriers curiously.

"Aw, nothin'," answered Bill. 'Just talking foolish like they all does—out o' his head!"

FOXY GRANDPA'S DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

ONE day, when we were in Sidney, Australia, I said to Bobby and Bunny:

"I think while we're over here we might as well go up to the great island of New Guinea."

"Is that where the Guinea hens come from?" asked Bobby.

"And the Guinea pigs?" asked Bunny.

"I don't know," I laughed, "but I understand that there are all manner of strange birds and animals on that island, because, you see, it is a wild place and very sparsely settled. In fact in the old days explorers rarely ventured there because of the dangerous coast. And, unfortunately, some of the early explorers were so cruel to the natives that ever after that whenever any strangers appeared, the natives attacked them, with such fury that they hastened back to their ships in dread of losing their lives.

"I wonder if it's a safe place for rabbits," said Bunny.

"And little boys," suggested Bobby.

"Oh, we won't go into any very dangerous place," I reassured them.

"So we took a small boat and when we landed in New Guinea, the very first day we were repaid for the effort we had made to go there. And when I tell you what we saw, I think you will agree with me.

"We were in the part of New Guinea called Papua, and that very afternoon when we arrived and were out taking a walk just to see what the place looked like, we came across the most extraordinary thing.

"When we saw it, Bobby exclaimed:

"Foxy Grandpa, look at this cute little hut!"

And sure enough there was a little hut about two feet high, built of sticks and boughs and just as neat as anything you ever saw.

"And look at the beautiful little garden in front of it!" shouted the boy in admiration, as we looked at the gaily colored flowers and berries which were arranged in front of the hut for all the world like a little garden in a front yard.

"I'll bet some Papuan children have made this," declared the boy.

"Children didn't make that garden, or build that house," answered Bunny with a wise look in his pixy eyes.

"Well, who did then?" demanded Bobby, ready for an argument.

"Just stay around here and we'll see," suggested my little rabbit.

That was enough. We settled ourselves comfortably and waited. In a few moments we heard a great fluttering of wings above our heads and then down swooped a company of birds. They chirped loudly, ran in and out of the little hut, and in a few moments several of them came out, and what do you think they did?

Those little birds commenced picking out the faded flowers and dried-up berries, while others replaced them with fresh ones.

We sat fascinated as we watched these busy little creatures running in and out of their house and tending to their garden as if their lives depended on it. It was growing dark now, and we left them all tucked safely away in their cozy home, where we could hear them chirping and cooing to each other.

"Wonderful!" murmured Bobby, as we went on our way. "Regular gardeners!"

"That's their name," explained Bunny; they're the gardener birds of Papua."

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaels

PROBLEMS! All must meet them! Problems every day: wisest heads will greet them in a cheery way. Problems won't be shunted out of sight or mind; daily we're confronted with another kind. How to get a living, making both ends meet; how to keep on giving thanks for all things sweet. How to cheer a brother when his road is dark; how to help another grasp hope's golden spark; how to see the beauty that is all about; how to hold to duty, spite of stress and doubt. Problems! Do not mind them; every man must know he is bound to find them, to be high or low. Part of each man's living; problems! Do your best! Render glad thanksgiving for your daily test.

WHEN people try to take away the hopes that make you glad, when folks are fain to fill your day with musings dire and sad, don't listen to their words of gloom, however much they say; but turn your thoughts to things that bloom like clover fields in May. Oh, turn to all the loveliness that girds this spinning earth, when people mumble of distress don't let it mar your mirth! Don't listen to the loud complaints that some voice all day long; they find no virtue in the saints, no harmony in song. But even if instead to see the good that waits on every side, learn truths you once misunderstood, cheap joys that will abide. Don't listen, then, to Folly's voice which chides each merry mood; but let your eager heart rejoice at all earth's boundless good.

WHEN men begin to build a house I watch them day by day and thrill at every beam they place, at every sill they lay. I love to see the building grow; it is a joyous thing to watch the laborers as they rise, to hear the hammers ring! It may be but a little place, no costly timbers there, and lacking labor's finer arts which make a dwelling fair; but, oh! the dreams its roof will guard, the hopes its walls will know; in fancy I can glimpse them all, the while I see it grow! Though it is but a frame-work still, it speaks of days to be, of laughter that will sound within, of love that it will see. When men begin to build a house, great home or bungalow, I love to watch them day by day, I thrill to see it grow!

IT IS not granted every groping hand to find great deeds to do, vast works and splendid purposes were planned for but the happy few. For but the few were tasks of glory set, the few gain fame's far crest, the few alone can make the world forget its folly and unrest. But every one they grasp the share of joy designed for him alone, if he will ever eagerly employ the gifts which are his own. If he will give his best of hand and heart, nor be content with less, he will increase by his much-needed part. Earth's sum of loveliness. All may not write a deathless symphony to last through ages long; but all may add their notes to melody that makes of life a song!

Boston women playing with fire. A gay coterie which recks not of consequences. When disaster threatens, one woman pays the major share of the bill. Follow these women in "WIVES ADRIFT," beginning in next Monday's American.

TRAFFIC CLUB TO HEAR TALK BY WELLS

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

President Wellington Wells of the Massachusetts State Senate will be the guest of and address the Traffic Club of New England at the Copley-Plaza, May 12, Secretary-Treasurer P. L. Stuart of the Traffic Club tells me. The head of the Senate on Beacon Hill is an interesting and forceful public speaker, very much in demand. He is one of the few men from Boston ever sent to the Senate who can boast owning and operating a farm. President Wells' farm, by the way, in Chesham, N. H., is one of the largest, if not, indeed, the largest, in the Granite State.

Wellington Wells E. H. H. Simmons

The extremely favorable business and economic conditions during the last year, together with the abundance of funds seeking investment and the easy availability of credit for carrying securities, were the outstanding factors in the rise of security prices during that period, according to E. H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

In an analysis of the record of Stock Exchange failures as compared with those of banks and commercial organizations since 1900, the results of the Stock Exchange questionnaire system in very sharply reducing Stock Exchange in solvencies were shown. Before 1922, insolvencies among Stock Exchange members were proportionately less frequent than those of commercial firms, about as frequent as those of American banks in general and considerably more frequent than those of national banks. Since 1922, however, those of national banks, all American banks and commercial firms either rose sharply or remained at high levels, while those on the Stock Exchange dropped sharply.

In the report is revealed the plan which the Exchange is now working out to segregate the listed but inactive stocks which enjoy a market over-the-counter from those other stocks on the floor of the Exchange which are more active. It is proposed to remove the inactive issues from their positions at the trading posts and establish a new set of rules for transactions in such issues not differing greatly from those which are followed in present day trading in inactive bonds.

FINANCE
—By B. C. Forbes—

Chicago, May 6.—Talk of Florida's developments and of Florida's boom in real estate values, I have been visiting a large section near Chicago, Skokie Valley, where land has jumped from $150 or $500 an acre, to as high as $50 and $100 a front foot.

Transportation has done it.

There is now being opened by the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad what is perhaps the best equipped suburban line in America, an enterprise equally notable for its mechanical excellence and for what might be called its human excellence, meaning its unique cultivation of human relationships, of public good will. The company has had as many as five majors among its employes at the same time! All its workers are encouraged to live in the communities served by the company. No hotel is more anxious to do favors, to tender little services to its patrons.

I never had a faster or smoother ride in my life than that on this company's line between Chicago and Milwaukee. We beat the time of the Twentieth Century. And on the way we dined sumptuously. Also, this traction company provides an observation car.

It doesn't sit back and wait for business to come to it. It employs a force of hustling salesmen to drum up both freight and passenger business. It is at this moment busy spending something like $150,000 on purely temporary facilities to take care of one day's business, the million who are expected to attend the Eucharistic Congress at Mundelein, on the company's line in June. Its cars will be called upon to move perhaps one-third of this total. Not a penny of profit is looked for. But a superhuman performance on this eventful day will add incalculably to the company's good name.

Does all this extraordinary effort to please the public pay? Let the figures talk, the figures covering the ten years' operation under the Insull-Budd management:

	1916	1925
Operating revenue	$1,157,191	$6,850,163
Operating expense	714,887	5,066,956
Net revenue from operation	442,804	1,870,203
Operating income	376,290	1,461,048
Non-operating income	6,208	151,673
Gross income	382,474	1,613,821
Fixed charges	237,996	832,991
Net income	144,478	780,630

Courtesy, service, sentiment have paid. Will other traction companies, railroad companies and all other classes of corporations please take note?

Here's a suggestion to companies and executives who are not meeting with a maximum of success in their relations with their own work people or with the public: write and ask President Budd for detailed information regarding his company's principles, policies and practices.

WIRE BIGGEST FACTOR IN COPPER CONSUMPTION

At the Kennecott Copper annual meeting, President Birch said the biggest single item of copper consumption at present is copper wire, with building demand showing substantial increase, especially in brass pipe.

Kennecott, he said, had produced from its own properties and prorated from its subsidiaries 515,000,000 pounds of copper in 1925, and had sold during the year 516,000,000 pounds.

President Birch stated there had been great improvements in metallurgy of copper in recent years. Pre-war recoveries of copper came to 60 per cent. to 65 per cent., while at present recoveries are around 85 per cent. He was inclined to believe that in most instances the margin of profit in producing copper is just as large at present as pre-war in dollars and cents, but of course, he added, the buying power of the money is not nearly as large.

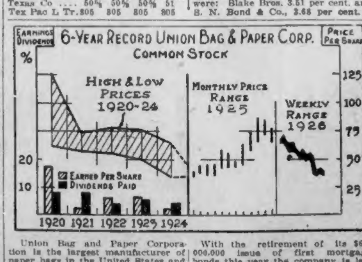
Relying to a question regarding African competition, Mr. Birch said it is still far off. African copper, in time, he said, would become competitive, but it was hoped that by then world consumption would be growing as fast as new copper was coming in from Africa and other sources.

MILL ISSUES ARE SOLD AT NEW LOWS FOR 9126

At the stock auctions in Boston several mill issues sold at their lowest prices for this year. Pepperell was conspicuous. Touching 115 it was off 30 points from this year's high of 145. Nashawena at 89, Nashua Manufacturing common at 48, West Point at 125¼ and Draper Corporation at 138¼ were all in new low ground. Plymouth Cordage Co., manufacturer of rope and twine, made a new year's low also at 135½.

NORTHAMPTON'S LOAN IS AWARDED AT HOME

Northampton awarded to Hampshire County Trust Co., Northampton, at 3.49 per cent. interest to follow plus $4 premium, $250,000 loan payable Nov. 22. Other bidders were: Blake Bros. 3.51 per cent. and S. N. Bond & Co., 3.68 per cent.



Union Bag and Paper Corporation is the largest manufacturer of paper bags in the United States and is reported to have a production nearly double that of its nearest competitor.

The company was incorporated in 1899 at which time it took over the properties and businesses of seven small companies. Since, other companies have been acquired until, at the present time, all plants owned or controlled have a total daily capacity of 38,500,000 bags.

With the retirement of its $6,000,000 issue of first mortgage bonds this year the company is left without funded debt except for one $100,000 bond issue.

There is no preferred stock issue, the entire capitalization consisting of 146,044 shares of capital stock with a par value of $100.

From 1916 through 1924 dividends were paid regularly. Since 1924, however, earnings have been inadequate for dividends because of closer competition and low prices.

FEARS LOSSES FOR AMERICAN INVESTORS

R. W. McNeel, Boston financial expert, will sail May 12 for Europe to make an exhaustive study of European financial and economic conditions. He will sail from New York on the Steamer Conte Biancamano, landing at Naples. He will investigate investment opportunities throughout the Continent and in Great Britain.

Mr. McNeel believes that the safeguarding of American capital and American investors requires an extremely careful study and knowledge of European conditions. "An increasing volume of American capital is likely to seek investment abroad," he says.

"Unquestionably American investors are going to suffer substantial losses on many foreign investments because of their lack of knowledge of conditions surrounding them. So far we have advised against the purchase of such securities because we have believed that in a world still in a state of upheaval, if there is financial stability and safety anywhere, it is in the United States and that it is sounder policy to seek out the sound and promising things in this country rather than to invest in foreign things in regard to whose future there is of necessity much guess-work.

"That may sound provincial but American investors are in my opinion altogether too sanguine about the future of many foreign countries and institutions in those countries.

"Human memory is so short and knowledge of political and financial history is so scant that it is easy to forget what a period of revolution in political organization and in finance we are in today. When we consider that within a single lifetime we have seen the unification of Germany, the unification of Italy, the disintegration of Russia and Austria Hungary, and a terrific burden of debt loaded on to these and other European countries, it is altogether too sanguine a view to go forward investing one's funds in foreign securities on the theory that 'everything is going to be all right.'

"The present upheaval in Great Britain, in which the very foundation of constitutional government is being challenged, is but a symptom of that underlying unrest which today injects an element of uncertainty as to the stability of so many things in Europe. It behooves the investor to see the dangers as well as the opportunities."

NEW CORNELIA COPPER KEEPS UP PRODUCTION

New Cornelia Copper Co. keeps its production up to the 7,300,000 mark. In February it dropped output to just under 6,000,000 pounds due to a slight interruption at its milling plant together with a short month. Production in April of 7,268,300 tons brought total output for the first four months of this year up to nearly 28,000,000 pounds. This compares with 25,800,000 pounds in the first four months of 1924 and 19,813,000 pounds in the corresponding period of 1923. Thus New Cornelia is today hitting a production pace of 84,000,000 pounds annually, or nearly 50 pounds for each of its 1,800,000 shares outstanding. A profit of 4½ cents a pound, not at all a difficult thing for New Cornelia with its 9 cent operating cost, would mean net earnings for the stock of $2.50 a share. And about 70 per cent. of New Cornelia is owned by the Calumet & Arizona Mining Co.

VT. HYDRO ELECTRIC HAS FAVORABLE YEAR

Favorable operating conditions and good water supply for its nine hydro-electric generating plants combined to make 1925 a successful year for the Vermont Hydro-Electric corporation. Gross earnings were $709,074, and net income was $142,094, according to the annual report issued last week.

Customers served totalled 5,762 at the end of the year, an increase of 441 over the previous year. The company serves fourteen communities in a territory with an estimated population of 33,000. Thirty-eight additional communities are supplied with electric power at wholesale.

The report reviews the construction work of the year, which included a ten-mile transmission line from Poultney to Pawlet, a new steel outdoor substation at Rutland, a 4,000-volt line from Pawlet to Wells, and another line of similar capacity from East Poultney to Middletown Springs. Three miles of 11,000-volt line were purchased at Cavendish. Remodeled office and merchandise quarters were completed at Rutland.

ECONOMY STORES PASSES 300 MARK WITH A JUMP

Grocery Stores Corporation recently passed the 300-mark in number of stores operated. This compares with 262 stores on June 30 last and 136 on June 30, 1924.

ARCHITECT GETS $150 FOR FALSE ARREST

As Patrolman Frank J. O'Neil of Division 4, had no right to arrest Clarence P. Wilson, a Boston architect, without first having obtained a warrant from the court, Judge Murray in the Municipal Civil Court has awarded Wilson damages in the sum of $150 against O'Neil for false arrest.

Wilson was sitting on the grass on Boston Common near Beacon street, when O'Neil ordered him to move. As Wilson did not respond immediately to the command of the officer, O'Neil placed him under arrest for violation of park rules. The offence being only a misdemeanor O'Neil had not the right to arrest Wilson without a warrant, it was held.

JAMAICA PLAIN WIFE GRANTED WEEKLY SUM

Mrs. Mabel E. Bligh of Jamaica Plain, who a year and a half ago sought a legal separation from Alfred A. Bligh charging non-support, has been granted custody of her four children also a weekly allowance. The award was made by Judge McCool in Suffolk Probate Court, it being shown by Mrs. Bligh that she has been supporting the children for years. Their ages range from 14 to 19.

Boston women playing with fire. A gay coterie which recks not of consequences. When disaster threatens, one woman pays the major share of the bill. Follow these women in "WIVES ADRIFT," beginning in next Monday's American.

What Drugs Cost This Nation

The Astounding Figures Ought to Interest SOMEBODY

When you talk about the horrible sufferings caused by the drug habit—no suffering is more intense, more dreadful—you arouse a CERTAIN amount of sympathy and interest.

Everybody says "SOMETHING ought to be done about it." Nothing IS done. The bootleggers of cocaine, morphine, heroin, opium and other drugs continue their business. There is BIG PROFIT in it. They take what risk there is. And the risk isn't great.

The drugs are easily hidden, any man can carry concealed in his pockets a small fortune in the most dreadful of these drugs.

Bootleg whiskey is comparatively bulky, hard to hide.

The seller of drugs, preying upon the miserable drug fiend, can hide in his hatband enough for a day's "business."

The Government does nothing much about the laws concerning narcotics. Perhaps it CAN'T do anything, perhaps it is too busy with the bootleg whiskey to pay much attention to the bootleg morphine, although he who forms the drug habit is captured FOR LIFE, and is to be pitied a thousand times more than the victim of whiskey.

While sympatny produces little Government effort, perhaps worry about money might produce more.

National authorities, struggling for economy, have little idea how much money goes from the most miserable class of population into the hands of the vilest, from the unhappy drug fiends to those that prey upon their misery and supply them with the drugs.

There are in the United States, according to official statistics, at least one million men and women that are habitual users of drugs. Such unfortunates must have the drug EVERY DAY.

To be without it is most horrible suffering and misery, every effort, EVERY sacrifice will be made to get it.

The average price of a grain of morphine is one dollar, sometimes it is bought for fifty cents, sometimes when the victim is rich, or can be blackmailed through intense suffering, the price is as high as six dollars a grain.

The average price is at least one dollar per grain, the average dose "necessary" for the average unfortunate addict is five grains per day.

The costs given are as reported by Colonel Nutt, expert in the drug evil, and he KNOWS.

Cut the estimated drug consumption cost in two. You find that the drug habit costs its victims in the United States NINE HUNDRED AND TWELVE MILLIONS FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS A YEAR.

Think what that gigantic sum, $912,500,000, might mean if it could be used for the welfare of the nation, instead of being used as it is used, to condemn miserable drug victims to even more dreadful agony and misery.

With such a sum of money this country could wipe out malaria as completely as yellow fever has been wiped out. And that, once achieved, would mean restoring millions to health and to productive labor, and would increase by hundreds of millions yearly the wealth of the United States.

The nation has been discussing the building of a ship canal to connect the Great Lakes with the ocean, estimated to cost from $250,000,000 to $500,000,000. The Administration and Congress hesitates, for that is A GREAT DEAL OF MONEY.

The money taken from miserable drug victims in one year would build three such canals.

Perhaps contemplation of the CASH COSTS of the drug habit and of drug bootlegging will arouse the Government to energetic action. Even at best, unhappily, it is questionable whether anything can be done, except very slowly, to save the miserable drug victims.

They are hopelessly in the grasp of the drug and of the criminal that supplies it.

They cannot SAVE THEMSELVES. They will give all they have for the drug, and then plead to get more of it.

drug pedlars have their regular victims and customers, who drug peddlers have their regular victims and customers, who dare not betray them—since betrayal would mean that they must do without the drug.

It is one of the worst, most difficult problems of our civilization, and unfortunately, like our crime problem, it seems to have been made worse BY PROHIBITION.

Many that could not get less harmful stimulants or sedatives have turned to drugs as easily concealed, not realizing the dreadful slavery ahead of them.

Figures that cannot be questioned show to what an extent the illicit drug trade is carried on in this country.

For so-called "legitimate" use, medical and scientific, the nation imports with legal approval eight tons of the deadly drugs. In addition to this, for those unhappy addicts who buy from bootleggers in defiance of law, there are secretly imported 118 TONS OF DRUGS DESTROYING MIND, BODY AND CHARACTER.

Unfortunately many drug addicts owe the beginning of their trouble to unwise prescriptions given by doctors for alleviating pain. Doctors of high class, which means, of course, the great majority, realize this great responsibility and are most earnest in their precautions.

They realize, also, to their deep regret that too many in their profession are, in fact, themselves dealers in the drugs, contributing to the desires of drug addicts in the form of "legal prescriptions."

Use of Leisure

Dudley C. Watson, Chicago sociologist, and, we assume, a bachelor, is worried because woman, released from household drudgery by labor-saving devices in the home, is using some of her new freedom in enjoyment rather than study.

He fears that so much shopping, so much theatre or movie, so much motoring and so much bridge, will make her a "static dumb-bunny." Rather than that, he would doom her to four teen hours a day of scrubbing.

That is, he says he would. He is just talking—and talking a bit more wildly than he probably would if there were a wife to consider.

Suppose, now, some imbecile

MEDICAL RESEARCH A GREAT BOON

By DR. FRANK CRANE

DR. C. E. A. WINSLOW, Professor of Public Health at Yale, recently called attention in a lecture at Cooper Union to the remarkable degree to which humanity is indebted to the medical profession.

Many people regard doctors as simply old-fashioned stand-patters who are opposed to everything new in the realm of discovery. They are not aware that it is from scientific research that much of the benefit to the human race has accrued. The experiments of Louis Pasteur in 1856 showed that living microbes are the cause of fermentation. This laid the foundation for the new science of preventive medicine.

On the basis of these discoveries and their applications by Joseph Lister in England and Robert Koch in Germany has grown up the whole framework of modern practice in controlling and preventing epidemic diseases.

Walter Reed and his associates laid the foundation for the world-wide campaign against yellow fever, and this disease is rapidly disappearing from the earth in consequence.

Through the discovery in regard to the control or immunity by the use of sera and vaccines, we have been shown how the invading microbe can be combatted even after invasion has actually taken place.

Pasteur's own work in anthrax and rabies resulted in the greatest boon ever conferred upon the animal creation. Through the discovery of diphtheria antitoxin and typhoid fever vaccine and the recent scarlet fever serum, one after another some of the most dangerous communicable diseases have been controlled.

Much remains to be done, but there has been steady and patient growth by medical research that brings us every day nearer to the time that Pasteur himself foresaw when there shall be no more menace of contagious diseases on the earth.

This lecture by Dr. Winslow on preventive medicine and prolonging life was the fifth of a series of six lectures at Cooper Union. His whole series is of much importance.

The Kind of "Remedy" That Is Worse Than the Disease

By James A. Reed

ALL decent humans would like to see the battle flags permanently furled, the roar of cannon forever stilled. The dispute over our foreign policy is, therefore, not between the advocates of war and the advocates of peace. The dispute is between two classes of people, each desiring the peace and prosperity of the world, and let us hope most of them desiring especially the peace and prosperity of America.

LET me illustrate the fallacy of the argument of the proponents of the World Court. Leprosy has existed throughout the ages. It is the "white curse" of the Orient. Our policy has been to guard ourselves against its contamination by keeping away from leprosy-infected districts and colonies, and by guarding our gates against the entrance of its victims. Nevertheless occasionally an individual in the United States is afflicted with the disease. Our policy, therefore, has not been entirely successful.

Suppose, now, some imbecile were to declare that the way to exterminate leprosy is to turn the lepers loose on the community and for everybody to visit the leper colonies and purify the lepers by fondling their diseased flesh, and we were to reply that we declined the experiment. Would it lie in the mouths of the proponents of the new doctrine, therefore, to declare that we were in favor of leprosy and that we must accept their imbecilic proposition unless we could invent a nostrum absolutely guaranteed to exterminate the dread disease?

We would answer that, although the present methods have not entirely wiped out the curse of leprosy, the proposed remedy would contaminate the world; that our people would its along the highways rotting with the awful disease. We would say that, although we could not produce a perfect remedy, we nevertheless declined to abandon a method which had confined the disease and lessened its ravages for the foolish and deadly Schenck proposed.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"WILL I ever feel the same to him again?" wails Marion.

Marion's husband has just committed Bonehead Act No. 8,093. He has told Marion about The Other Woman. The Other Woman functioned a long time ago in Joe's past, years before he met Marion. But while she was on the job, she functioned 100 per cent. It wasn't an admirable affair and remorse gnawed at Joe considerably ever since. So, like most fool humans, he thought he'd find relief in language. Now he knows better. Now he has two big blunders to forget instead of one. For Marion is one of those Adoring Women who take it as a personal grievance if their idols prove to have feet of clay.

"I just worshipped him, Elsie," she cries. "And now I see it was all a mistake. He was never the man I thought he was. Can I ever feel the same to him again?"

Will I ever feel the same again? That's one of humanity's commonest cries.

A friend fails us at a crucial moment—will we ever feel the same about that friend again?

Some big adventure fizzles out; we look back on the hot enthusiasms that preceded that adventure and wonder if we'll ever feel the same about life again.

Moon Over Faith

A cruel sorrow or seeming injustice falls upon us; we review the childlike faith we once had in a friendly Providence and wonder if we'll ever feel the same about God again.

We fall down in some crisis and with shamed hearts wonder if we'll ever feel the same about ourselves again.

Will we ever feel the same again?

Of course not!

Why should we?

Nothing that grows can ever feel again as it felt last year or yesterday or the preceding second.

Experience is growth, although we may not realize it.

Each second we grow away from something—away from some old ignorance, or some old trust, from some old sin or some old happiness.

Each second we grow toward something—toward new wisdom, new adjustments, new strength, new humility, new hard knocks and new blessings.

Each second we lose something—something that was precious as well as something that was base.

But each new second we also gain something—something that will hurt as well as something that will heal.

That's the stuff that Gods and Men are made of.

Then how absurd sound our little whimpers: "Will I ever feel the same again? Will I ever trust my friends as much as I once trusted them? Will I ever lean as blindly on God as I once leaned on him? Will I ever love life as much as I once loved it? Will I ever be as sure of myself as I once was?"

Can Feel Better

Of course you won't.

But you can, if you will, feel in a better, bigger way about your husband or your wife, your child or your friend, your God or yourself. You can never again feel the blind, implicit faith of a child. You have shed that faith as you've shed your milk teeth. You'd look smart going through life with milk teeth, wouldn't you? Yet you wail with anguish if your mind loses its milk teeth.

The mind will lost its milk teeth and nothing you can do will prevent it. But you can and will grow a stronger grip on life. You can replace blind confidence with understanding and sympathy. You can widen your childish love into a great human tolerance. You can sweeten and deepen your own character by a realization of your own weaknesses. You can think of God as a partner instead of as a trellis upon which you may flop.

It isn't as easy to think of life or love or yourself or God that way. It makes you use your head and stiffen your spine and stand upon your own hind legs. Which is much more tiresome than being wheeled in a perambulator. But it's the proud way to live and if you have the spunk you'll be glad you can never "feel the same."

Business Progresses

Refuses to Follow Nervous Example Set by Wall Street

Business has refused to follow the nervous example set recently by Wall Street.

Having come through stock market liquidation and real estate deflation without a tremor, the country promises to enjoy a long period of active business and widespread, well-paid employment.

The late Spring has not been good for certain agricultural States, yet soil conditions are pronounced unusually good, and nearly all authorities confidently look for generous harvests.

Every week brings convincing testimony of the faith and optimism cherished in influential financial circles.

No more important group of men of large affairs could be found in the entire world than those composing the board of directors of the U. S. Steel Corporation. They have just demonstrated their optimism concerning this country's outlook by raising the regular dividend on the common shares to 7 per cent. a year.

The four months just ended have brought a record-breaking number of cheering dividend announcements—further evidence of the optimistic sentiment prevailing in high places; sentiment based upon the earnings already achieved and upon the encouraging prospects within sight.

The security markets have regained their senses. Reckless selling by professional Wall Street speculators no longer frightens any appreciable number of the 15,000,000 investors throughout the country into parting with their holdings. Some of the gambling destructionists have had their fingers burned.

What is happening in Wall Street should warn business men against the policy of fright and cowardice. The winners in this inexhaustibly rich land are not those given to showing the white feather, but those who have exercised unwavering courage when passing clouds have stampeded backbone-less skeptics.

America's conditions never were sounder than they are today, her prospects for business and for workers never more inspiring.

OTHERS MUST REALIZE YOU HAVE ABILITY

Perhaps the reasons you are not better known and your services more in demand is because you have not done anything to draw favorable attention to yourself.

Your talents would be valuable to others if they were known to them.

You hesitate to give free service whereby you would become known. Your ability is not appreciated because it is not realized by anyone but yourself.

You think people should come to you and ask you for your services; you will not seek opportunities.

No matter how gifted you are, you will remain unnoticed; unless you do something to conveyr the fact to others.

Don't be so reticent about showing what you can do.

Because you hold back instead of pressing forward, others, less proficient than you, are beading you out.

Don't wait for someone to push you into prominence.

Get busy and help yourself.

Then be sure you are prepared to make your appearance such that it will bring favorable notice.

Don't imagine that anyone will overlook lack of preparation on your part. They are bound to be critical and you must measure up.
